Louis Wins in First.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Yankee Stadium, New York, June 22.—The Brown Bomber came back tonight—all the way back—with an explosion that electrified the fight world and smashed Germany's Max Schmeling helpless and sprawling in less than one round.

Dusky Joe Louis waited two years to avenge the only defeat of his professional career, but then took little more than two minutes to achieve it under the Yankee Stadium's floodlights with a devastating blast that produced the quickest ending in history for a world heavyweight championship match.

Berlin, June 22 (AP).—K. Metzner, head of the German Boxing Federation, who listened to the broadcast with members of the International European Boxing Federation (F. I. E. A.), said he believed the fight—because of its sudden end—did not give a clear picture of whether Louis or Schmeling was the better fighter.

The 24-year-old Alabama colored man, knocked out in the same ring in 12 rounds by Schmeling in 1936, turned loose an attack of such suddenness and ferocity that the German never had a chance.

Beaten to the first punch by the Bomber's snake-like left, Schmeling was knocked down three times and so badly battered that his handlers threw in the towel in token of defeat as the timekeeper tolled the count of "eight" on the last knockdown.

The finish came after 2 minutes, 4 seconds of the first round as a howling crowd of 80,000, thrilled by Louis' spectacular rush to triumph, witnessed the most sensational heavyweight title finish since Jack Dempsey flattened Luis Angel Firpo at the Polo Grounds in September, 1923.

Dempsey's memorable conquest came after 57 seconds of the second round, a total of only 3 minutes, 57 seconds of whirlwind action.

Man of 50 Is Grilled In Murder of Widow

Suspect's Name in Death of U. S. Employe Kept Secret by Police.

By Marshall Andrews.
A Staff Correspondent.

North Beach, Va., June 22.—A gray-haired, 50-year-old man, who police said was "definitely a suspect," was questioned here tonight in connection with the strange death of Mrs. Esther Lewis, Washington woman and expectant mother.

Still being questioned shortly before midnight, the man was said to have been an acquaintance of Mrs. Lewis. He identified her body, found in a Maryland creek Monday, after the police had asked him to come here.

It was expected that the man, whose name was not divulged, would be lodged in the Calvert County jail at Prince Frederick overnight. He was being questioned by four policemen, headed by Capt. William McK. Johnson, of the Maryland State police. Others were Detective Sergt. Jeremiah Flaherty, of Washington, and Corp. Charles W. Magaha and Private H. C. Carl, of the Maryland police.

An odd aspect of the investigation developed when it was learned that Anne Arundel County police believed they had important information bearing on the case. Police from that adjoining county, however, were not allowed to question the prisoner, held by Calvert County officials.

3 British Ships Sunk.

By the United Press.

Valencia, June 22.—An insurgent seaplane bombed and sank three British ships off this blockaded loyalist port today after machine-gunning their decks. Another British merchantman was attacked in the Straits of Gibraltar.

Descriptions of the seaplane provided by survivors of the attacks indicated it might have been the "phantom raider" blamed for a series of midnight bombings of foreign ships up and down the loyalist east coast.

Today's sinking brought to 24 the number of British merchant vessels attacked since May 1 by insurgent planes—presumably from Gen. Franco's Balearic Island base—with a loss of 12 lives.

A total of 14 ships have been sunk in the nearly two years of the Spanish civil war, killing 35 seamen and wounding 54.

Capt. Daniel Kermode, of the 4,789-ton freighter Thorpeness, which went down at anchor a mile off Valencia with 7,200 tons of grain after being shattered by an aerial bomb, said the attacks were "deliberate" and without justification.

The other victims of the seaplane were the 3,054-ton merchantman Sunion, which has been flying the Union Jack since its recent transfer from Greek registry, and the 3,336-ton Gloxinia, out of Newcastle, according to Kermode.

Valencia was raided at noon by five trimotor planes, which concentrated on the port area with heavy damage and several victims.

Raiders attacked Barcelona twice early today, dropping at least 200 bombs and killing many civilians.

The British admiralty announced in London that the destroyer Imogen had released the British merchant ship African Trader, intercepted in the Mediterranean by a lone seaplane. The steamer was said to have been given radio instructions to proceed to the Span-

5 Appointed To Monopoly Investigation

Arnold, Douglas Among Representatives of the Administration.

Dispute Over Procedure Possible; FTC Man Yet to Be Picked.

Five of the six Administration representatives on a monopoly investigating committee were definitely chosen yesterday, and will be announced, subject to White House approval, as organizational discussions between the Congressional and departmental members of the committee get under way.

The Federal officials who will join with three Senators and three Representatives, already announced, in doing the work of overhauling the Nation's industrial system, will be as follows:

Assistant Attorney General Thurman W. Arnold, who is in charge of the Anti-trust Division of the Justice Department.

Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury.

Isador Lubin, head of the Bureau of Labor Statistics in the Labor Department.

Richard C. Patterson, jr., Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, who, in turn, is appointing Commissioner Jerome N. Frank as his alternate to sit and act for him on the committee.

FTC Unrepresented.

Out of the whole monopoly committee of 12 the present line up leaves only the Federal Trade Commission still unrepresented. One of the FTC commissioners may become the representative, perhaps Chairman Garland S. Ferguson, but it is expected that Willis J. Ballinger, economic adviser for the commission, may do most of the work.

The administrative designees are all New Dealers. Assistant Attorney General Arnold, who has voiced pronounced suspicion of the traditional operations of business; Oliphant, who helped to write the undistributed corporate profits tax; and Douglas and Frank, who have been equally active in extending the scope of Governmental reform regulations, are expected to be the most aggressive of the departmental members of the committee.

The Congressional members include Senators Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming; William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho; William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, and Representatives Hatton W. Sumners (Democrat), of

4 High-Ranking Nazis Named as Spy 'Brains'

F.B.I. Fights Publication of G-Man's 'Inside' Stories on Case.

The Spy Menace.

Exposure of a German spy ring in New York recalled that Germany was intensely interested in America's industrial mobilization plans, adopting them after her officers studied at the Army War College in Washington.—Page 4.

Spy Chiefs Trailed.

The real "brains" behind the German espionage ring exposed in New York, Federal authorities said yesterday, were four high-ranking German army and navy officers.

United States Attorney Lamar Hardy, of New York, who obtained the indictment of 18 alleged members of the ring, said the four were Lieut. Comdr. Udo von Bonin and Lieut. Comdr. Hermann Menzel, of the counter-espionage section of the Reich war ministry in Berlin; Capt. Lieut. Erich Pfeiffer, in charge of naval intelligence at Hamburg, and Lieut. Comdr. Ernst Mueller, in charge of naval intelligence at Bremen.

Hardy meanwhile moved to prevent publication of articles by Leon G. Turrou, former star G-man, which have been advertised as the "authentic inside story" of the smashing of the German spy ring.

Four of those indicted appeared in Federal court in New York yes-

U. S. Agencies To Add 6,000 Staff Jobs in Upturn Drive

Some Estimates Double Number to Be Hired in Capital and Field.

PWA Is Prepared To Engage 2,000

Many on Emergency Status for First Rush of New Program.

On the Recovery Front.

First funds from the pump-priming billions were released yesterday when the PWA freed $88,731,128 in loans and grants for projects that will cost $148,795,895.

Five of the six representatives of executive agencies, who will participate with Congressional committees in an investigation of monopoly, were selected. Business was assured that no "witch hunt" was contemplated.

Chairman Steagall, of the House Banking Committee, suggested a three-point program to "liberalize" banking laws and "restore general confidence."

A House subcommittee began a study of the question of merging all Federal agencies that regulate transportation.—Page 2.

More Jobs to Open.

By Robert C. Albright.
Copyright, 1938, by The Washington Post.

At least 6,000 new Federal Administrative jobs in Washington and in the field, with some unofficial estimates more than doubling that number, will be opened in the next few months as a direct result of emergency spending and other legislation enacted by the last Congress.

A survey yesterday of Washington's old and new bureau set-ups, voted record peace-time appropriations, indicated thousands of jobs would be opened over and above the 826,319 reported in the Civil Service Commission's last compilations.

PWA to Add 2,000.

Omitting 400,000 in expected additions to work relief rolls before the winter is out, and 7,000 in additional military personnel made possibly by national defense legislation, several regular and emergency administrative agencies are expected to undertake almost immediate personnel expansion, particularly in the field.

The Public Works Administration, which yesterday launched the recovery drive with initial pump-priming allotments, led the list with an anticipated increase of roughly 2,000 administrative workers this summer. Appropriation of approximately $15,000,000 for administrative expenses will enable PWA to increase its staff from 4,000 to about 6,000, to aid in guiding the $965,000,000 public works program. During the peak of the last recovery drive, PWA personnel reached 10,000. However, officials said that figure would not be reached again under present plans to build on an experienced organization in Washington and seven regional offices.

Farm Group to Add 1,500.

Works Progress Administration officials denied they contemplated any expansion in administrative personnel over their present 24,439 total, despite the new $1,425,000,000 work-relief appropriation. While PWA rolls have been cut, WPA has maintained its organization virtually intact and maintains it is adequate to handle the increased relief load. Meanwhile, work-relief rolls have gradually been moved up from 2,600,000 to 2,700,000 and may reach a 3,000,000 peak next winter.

Pending appointment by the President of an administrator to put the new wage-hour law into operation (probably around July 1), Labor Department officials were unable to estimate how large a staff would be required. Some unofficial estimates run as high as 1,200, but officials expressed doubt it would reach that total in the initial year of operation.

Party in Land Case Held After Walking Into Court and Shooting.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, June 22.—Two lawyers were shot to death today in Superior Court.

A few minutes later Capt. William Penprase said Arthur Emil Hansen, 38, had been arrested and had admitted shooting the two attorneys, H. D. McLaughlin and J. Irving Hancock.

Capt. Penprase said Hansen told him "everything went red" after Court Commissioner Kurtz Kauffman gave a decision in a land case to which Hansen was a party.

"I walked into the courtroom, saw those attorneys, and everything went red," the officer quoted Hansen.

Commissioner Kauffman narrowly escaped being shot. He had been walking with the two attorneys on the eighth floor, but excused himself for a few minutes. As he stepped aside there was a burst of gunfire, McLaughlin and Hancock fell to the floor, and Hansen fled down a corridor.

2 Shot, 75 Arrested As CIO Teamsters Strike, AFL Fights

New Orleans, June 22 (AP).—Two men were shot today in a clash police said occurred between C. I. O. and A. F. L. teamsters after a strike was called against nine trucking companies by a C. I. O.-affiliated union.

The officers named as the victims Arthur Picola, 55-year-old white man, and Sidney Alex, colored. Picola was described as seriously injured.

Seventy-five arrests were made after three truckloads of A. F. L. men drove up to the Dennis Sheen Transfer, Inc., where C. I. O. workers were maintaining a picket line.

Thirty-seven baseball bats and a length of rubber hose loaded with an iron pipe were confiscated.

Labor Board Picks CIO for 31 Coast Ports

Cites Majority and General Strike in Deciding for Bridges Union.

Harry Bridges and the Committee for Industrial Organization won a notable victory over the American Federation of Labor yesterday, when the National Labor Relations Board certified their International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union as exclusive bargaining agent for 12,860 longshoremen in 31 Pacific ports.

Over protests of the A. F. of L. that it had no authority to certify a bargaining unit to negotiate with more than one employer, the board designated the I. L. W. U. as sole bargaining agent for all longshoremen employed by companies in the following five employers' associations:

Waterfront Employers of Seattle, Waterfront Employers of Portland, Waterfront Employers Association of San Francisco, Waterfront Employers Association of Southern California, and the Shipowners Association of the Pacific Coast.

The board said that 9,557 of the 12,860 longshoremen involved had designated the I. L. W. U. as their choice for bargaining agent.

Bridges is the West Coast representative of the C. I. O., and is facing possible deportation on the ground that he is a Communist.

On the question of designating a coast-wide bargaining agent, the board said:

"The lessons of the disastrous local strikes in 1916 and 1919 have brought home to the longshoremen that action that is not coast-wide will result in a harmful setback to their self-organization.

"The history of bargaining and of the longshoremen's organizations is a vivid portrayal of the experiences of the longshoremen as they learned that, since their employers were acting together on a coast basis, they, too, would have to build a coast organization which would parallel the organization of the employers."

The board pointed out that the Wagner act expressly provided it could fix an "employer unit" and that the term included one or more associations of employers.

Navy Opens Bids For $35,937,000 On New Warships

The Navy accelerated its warship building program under the billion-dollar fleet expansion act yesterday when it opened bids on four destroyers, three submarines, three fleet tugs, and the propelling machinery for a submarine tender. Lowest estimates submitted by commercial shipbuilders aggregated $35,937,000.

The Bath Iron Works, Bath, Me., submitted the low unit bid of $5,315,000 on two of the four destroyers. The Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., Kearny, N. J., next lowest, asked $5,382,000. The Electric Boat Co., Groton, Conn., was the sole bidder on the three submarines, offering to build them without propelling machinery for $3,407,000 each. The Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Quincy, Mass., was low bidder on the 1,150-ton fleet tugs, at $1,288,000.

Award of contracts is expected soon. Naval officials indicated that bids for two or four battleships, expected to cost $70,000,000 or more each, will be asked by July 1.

Arrest by Sheriff Ends Hitch-Hiker Career as Bandit

A hitch-hike hold-up man was arrested last night by Sheriff E. S. Adrain of Loudoun County, after he had stolen the automobile of a man who had given him a ride, held up a gasoline station and been forced to stop on the highway because of a flat tire.

The arrest was made near Paeonian Springs, Va., a few minutes after the youthful bandit escaped from Hatcher's Service Station at Purcellville. He fired a shot at the station attendant, James N. Hough, when Hough refused to run from the station.

"I'll walk but I won't run," Hough told the man.

Earlier, near Rosslyn, the bandit was picked up by John D. Reese, of Arlington. Near Falls Church, the man pointed a pistol at Reese, took his money and his car. He was captured when, after leaving the gasoline station, the car blew out a tire and he stopped Edward Fincham, of Purcellville, to ask for assistance. Fincham, suspicious, notified the police of the bandit's whereabouts.

Lehman Faces Senate Fight By LaGuardia

Mayor Makes Clear He'll 'Say Something' if He Does Not Run.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 22.—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia dropped a hint that he might try for the senatorial seat left vacant by the death of Royal S. Copeland, for which Gov. Herbert H. Lehman already has declared himself.

LaGuardia made it clear, too, that if he did not actually go out for the job himself he expected in any case to have something to say about who is to get it.

If the mayor runs, his campaign unquestionably would be upon the contention that he was a better New Dealer than Gov. Lehman, who made himself available for the Democratic nomination last night shortly after Senator Copeland's funeral.

Lehman said late in the day that he had advised Postmaster General James A. Farley and "other leaders" of his intentions beforehand. He would not say, however, whether he had discussed the matter with President Roosevelt.

In such an event, a campaign for the favor, open or covert, of the Roosevelt Administration would make this State a fall battleground of even greater significance than it is now.

The mayor's comment upon Lehman's announced willingness to run was oblique but meaningful.

"The essential need," he said, "is for persons who will support good sound progressive policies in Washington, Albany and New York City. I will have something to say in a few days."

The phrase "something to say" suggested the mayor already had decided upon direct action in the Senatorial situation.

President Roosevelt may see Farley on Friday about New York affairs.

The Roosevelt-Lehman relations, once cordial, have been cool since the Governor denounced the President's Supreme Court reorganization proposal.

Steagall Seeks 'Liberalized' Banking Laws

'Confidence' Goal of Plan; Would Increase FDIC Limit to $10,000.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, of the House Banking Committee, suggested a 3-point program for the next Congress yesterday to "liberalize" banking laws and "restore general confidence."

In the first place, he said, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation should be permitted to insure individual accounts up to $10,000. The present limit is $5,000.

"Then we should pass some kind of legislation which would restore to banks generally their proper lending function, possibly through revision of reserve requirements," he said. "We need to do something to make banking safer and its facilities more readily available for everybody's use.

"And we should simplify bank examinations and control so as to end petty quarrels that have arisen over procedure."

Meanwhile the FDIC reported the Queen Elizabeth's Mother Dies; Visit To France Periled

London, (Thursday), June 23 (AP). The countess of Strathmore, 76, mother of Queen Elizabeth, died early today at her London home.

Wife of the Scottish Earl of Strathmore and Kinghorne, the Countess had been ill for some time, and both King George VI and the Queen were at her bedside when death came.

Born Nina Cavendish-Bentinck, the Countess, daughter of the late Rev. William Cavendish-Bentinck, member of the Ducal House of Portland, was married in 1881.

Court circles immediately wondered whether death of the Queen's mother would cause postponement of the state visit the King and Queen are scheduled to pay to France next week.

3 Police, 2 Children, 2 Men Hurt as U Street Celebrates

Two men were badly slashed, two young children cut and three policemen injured last night as Washington colored people, along with those of other cities throughout the country, wildly celebrated the victory of Joe Louis over Max Schmeling.

Attacked by two colored men who leaped from an automobile brandishing knives, Gregory Limerick, 29, of 416 Tenth street southwest, and Earl Wilber, 30, of 804 F street southwest, were badly cut. Both were taken to Emergency Hospital, where Limerick was said to be in a serious condition with severe gashes on his cheek and neck, one of them less than a half inch from the jugular vein. Wilber also suffered bad cuts about the face.

The three policemen were hurt while patroling in the exulting crowd at Fourteenth and U streets northwest, key point of Washington's Harlem. All were hit by projectiles—one by an empty bottle, the other two by stones. The injured policemen were Privates C. E. Mills, of the Sixth Precinct; H. H. Miller and J. P. Wallace, of the Second Precinct. Mills was taken to Freedmen's Hospital; Miller and Wallace to Garfield Hospital, where officials reported that Miller was badly hurt about the head.

Ralph Boccucci, 14, and his sister Mary, 13, were injured, not seriously, by a gang of young colored boys near their home at 30 New York avenue northeast last night.

He said that he and his sister were walking from a grocery store when the colored gang followed them, shouted at them, and finally

$88,731,128 'Broadside' Fired By PWA in War on Recession

Pump-priming billions started pouring into far-flung public construction projects yesterday to the tune of $88,731,128 in PWA allocations as Washington officialdom reflected business optimism and called for industrial co-operation.

First shower from the $3,753,000,000 spending-lending bill was announced by Public Works Administrator Ickes in allotting $77,814,628 in grants and $10,921,500 in loans for public improvement projects costing $148,795,895.

Most sanguine of a flurry of cheerful statements came from Secretary of Commerce Roper. He said the recession "seems to be scraping the bottom and business must take the bat with initiative and courage." He predicted improvement by fall and "quite likely" earlier.

Other developments on the spending-recovery front were:

High wholesale inventories, called one factor in the depression, have been cut 9 per cent since February, and dropped 14.5 per cent below the cost value of stocks on hand a year ago, the Commerce Department reported.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation reported further improvement in the banking situation during 1937, with banks "in a position to meet without difficulty any strain resulting from the rapid decline in business activity and national income during the latter part of the year."

An interdepartmental committee of top-ranking financial authorities put finishing touches on revisions of bank examination

Group in House Studies Carrier Control Merger

Considers I. C. C. Reform, Economical Traffic Allocation.

By the Associated Press.

A House Interstate Commerce subcommittee began yesterday an informal study of the question of merging the Government agencies which regulate transportation. Chairman Lea (Democrat), of California, said it might lead to "elimination" of some carriers, particularly railroads.

He said the inquiry would involve primarily a possible reorganization of the Interstate Commerce Commission and an allocation of traffic among the railroads, trucks and steamship companies.

"This would be done by rate regulation and a theoretical allocation of freight according to the type of carrier that could transport it most economically, Lea said.

Lea said that rather than a special session of Congress it would be better for committees to study the matter in the fall and be ready to submit a concrete proposal in January.

As to the I. C. C., Lea said "even the commission itself has proposed changes for itself to obtain greater efficiency.

Members of the sub-committee besides Lea are Representatives Crosser (Democrat), Ohio; Cole (Democrat), Maryland; Martin (Democrat), Colorado; Boren (Democrat), Oklahoma; Mapes (Republican), Michigan, and Wadsworth (Republican), New York.

Rail Pay Talk Delayed.

Cleveland, June 22 (AP).—The Brotherhod of Railroad Trainmen today asked railroads to postpone a conference scheduled for Tuesday at Chicago on the proposed 15 per cent wage cut.

A. F. Whitney, president, said the trainmen would not have time to assemble its 110 committee chairmen before that date.

The request was sent the carriers joint conference committee. The pay cut is scheduled to take effect July 1, but conferences are expected to delay it.

James Ring Named Social Group Head

James Ring, of the Alley Dwelling Authority, has been elected chairman of the co-ordinating committee of Neighborhood Councils, the Council of Social Agencies announced yesterday. As chairman of this group, Mr. Ring also is chairman of the Neighborhood Councils division of the Council of Social Agencies, and a director of the latter organization.

The Neighborhood Councils, founded four years ago, are founded upon two objectives: prevention or elimination of antisocial influences within the boundaries of each council, and a permanent alliance of all social forces within each neighborhood. There are seven councils in Washington.

RFC Sells Bonds Worth 60 Million

New York, June 22 (AP).—In the biggest such transaction in its history, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation today sold $60,000,000 worth of 4 per cent water district bonds at a 7-point premium.

The district is a $200,000,000 project under which water is to be taken from the Colorado River in Arizona for Los Angeles.

The RFC has put $150,000,000 in the district and expects to advance $50,000,000 more.

J. K. Wallace Dies; Marketing Expert

James K. Wallace, 56, senior marketing specialist for the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, died yesterday in a Kansas City hospital where he underwent an operation Sunday for a stomach ailment.

Wallace, who had been with the Bureau for 22 years, was taken off the train in Kansas City while on his way East from a series of marketing conferences in Colorado, Utah, Montana and Oregon.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed but services will be held in Kansas City. Interment will be private.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Wallace, of Ashburn, Va., a brother, of Park Ridge, Ill., and a sister in Pennsylvania.

Post Carrier Boy's Call Saves Woman

A 40-year-old woman was in Gallinger Hospital last night under observation after she was saved from death by a 14-year-old Washington Post carrier boy.

Police found a rubber hose extending from a gas jet in the kitchen to an improvised bed on the floor. The woman's condition was said to be not serious.

An intention to make secret inquiries into any complaints of "politics in relief" was disclosed yesterday by Chairman Sheppard (Democrat) Texas, of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee.

"We can't accomplish much," he said, "unless we make our investigations before the parties we are investigation learn that an inquiry is under way."

He added, the committee probably will not make known its list of agents. The Senate group will meet tomorrow to define formally its proposed policy of holding "undercover" inquiries before complaints are aired at hearings.

Senator Capper (Republican), Kansas said he believed the subject would be one of the most effective issues for Republican candidates.

Petersen Will Ask Vote Impounding, Check in 1 County

Minneapolis, June 22 (AP).—Hjalmar Petersen, loser in the Farmer-Labor Governorship race in Tuesday's Minnesota primary, said today he would ask that ballots in St. Louis County be impounded and he might demand a recount.

He made the announcement when additional returns from the northeastern Minnesota county had put Gov. Elmer Benson 13,000 ahead after the lead see-sawed during early tabulations. Petersen, railroad and warehouse commissioner, said Benson's two to one lead in St. Louis County "doesn't sound reasonable to us."

Returns from 3,345 of 3,739 precincts in the State gave Benson 197,504 and Petersen, 184,370.

2 Harlan Owners Say They Fought Anti-Union Fund

London, Ky., June 22 (U.P.).—Two coal operators swore today that they protested against the Harlan County Coal Operators Association using a "war chest" to fight unionism.

Called as defense witnesses in the trial of 16 corporations and 40 persons on charges of conspiring to voilate the Wagner labor relations act in the Harlan field, the operators said they threatened to resign from the association if any part of their dues went into the antiunion fight.

Robert Lawson, defendant and general manager of the Cornett-Lewis Coal Co., and Elmer Hall, head of the Three Point Coal Co., testified today.

Chamberlain Gets Kennedy Praise

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 22.—Terming the present a poor time to reach trade agreements, Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to England, today spoke warily and briefly of such matters as war debts and national issues.

At a press conference, before attending class day at Harvard with his son, Joseph P., jr., who will be graduated tomorrow, the ambassador said, "the war debt question is not before me," and added:

"Proposals to settle war debts on the basis of payment of principal—past interest payments to be credited on the principal to wipe out the interest—have been before Congress, I believe, for several months."

Kennedy praised Neville Chamberlain, British prime minister, and his success in settling "the Irish difficulties."

Knox Charges 'Propaganda' Factory in U. S.

Machine Seeks to Blame Business for Slump, Editors Are Told.

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., June 22.—Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee in 1936, told the Nation's editors tonight a "propaganda machine, the like of which this country never before has seen" is in full operation in America.

Declaring any effort to muzzle the press must not be allowed "to go unchallenged," Knox said the "propaganda machine" was being used "to fasten blame for the depression on business." Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, told his nonmetropolitan colleagues at the National Editorial Association convention: "There are agencies in every one of the 48 States . . . to spread the gospel of the new movement . . ."

"Let any person of prominence speak up in criticism," he declared, "and any one of three things—or all three—is likely to happen to him."

Either, he predicted, the person would find himself before a legislative investigating committee in Washington; a Federal official publicly would castigate him, or "he will be put on the calling list of the Internal Revenue Department."

Jackson Defends Labor Attorney in Disbarment Case

By the United Press.

Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson, in a letter made public last night, charged that disbarment proceedings against Edward Lamb, of Toledo, Ohio, are based on the fact that Lamb is a counsel for the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Active in an individual capacity, Jackson said he would continue participating in the Lamb defense committee, organized last spring by the National Lawyers' Guild, liberal wing of the legal profession, after disbarment proceedings were instituted against Lamb by the American Bar Association.

Lamb, as counsel for the United Shoe Workers of America, in a case involving the Williams Manufacturing Co., of Portsmouth, Ohio, charged that he and his clients had been "hijacked" by the court.

Jackson wrote to a critic, W. R. Daley, of Cleveland, that he and the committee did not approve of the language, but that the proper penalty was a fine. Concluding that the "vindictive" disbarment proposal was due to Lamb being a "labor lawyer," he added.

"My position on the committee is that I shall defend the right of any member of our profession to appear habitually, if he desires, in labor cases, and the right of a man at the bar to become a 'labor lawyer,' as well as to be a 'corporation lawyer.'"

WPA Offers to Aid Cleveland Needy

U. S. Will Have Half Air Trade, Johnson Says

Tells Electrical Engineers Marine Slump Must Not Reoccur.

The United States is determined that its commercial airlines shall have an "equitable share" of the coming transatlantic air travel, Col. J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, declared yesterday.

Addressing the American Institute of Electrical Engineers at the Mayflower Hotel, he predicted that in the future transatlantic travel will fall into three classes. One will be by airplane in 18 hours, another dirigible and another by boat.

"We have said before, and we repeat, we have but one mind—that an equitable share of this transoceanic business shall always be American," Johnson said.

"Translated in terms of air transportation between the United States and Europe, it means that American aviation interests shall enjoy one-half of all the air service business across the Atlantic, for without dispute, we furnish, always, more than one-half the traffic.

Other speakers on the day's program were Dr. Willis R. Gregg, chief, United States Weather Bureau, who outlined recent progress in weather forecasting, and W. H. Harrison, president of the institute.

Safety Speaker Assails Traffic Ticket 'Fixing'

J. G. Schurman, Jr., Tells Seminar Judge, Driver Both to Blame.

By Howard F. Wentworth,
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, June 22.—In a scathing denunciation of the traffic ticket "fixer," Judge Jacob Gould Schurman, jr., chief city magistrate of New York, addressing members of the second Commercial Investment Trust Seminar of Safety, today appealed to the Nation's courts for support in a renewed drive against special motoring "privileges."

He laid equal blame on the motorist who attempts to avoid punishment for his offense by seeking the "fix" and on the judge or prosecutor who bestows the favor.

"So far as I can observe," said Magistrate Schurman, "there are two ways and only two ways—in which traffic courts can be operated. They can be run as extra-judicial agencies of the government, as fixing mills through which favors are extended to the elect, or they can be run honestly, as courts. There is no middle ground.

If traffic courts are run as fixing mills, he said, the resulting spectacle is as sinister as it is revolting.

"Fix" Nullifies Law.

During his attack on the "special privilege" type of motorists and judges who uphold the "insidious fix," Magistrate Schurman told the 50 newspapermen attending the safety seminar:

"All the judge or magistrate has to do is inscribe 'suspended sentence' and sign his name to the papers. If he is in a hurry or the press of business is great, he can curtail matters by writing merely a cryptic 'S. S.' and add only his initials."

By doing this, said Magistrate Schurman, the "fixing" judge is actually undertaking to nullify the traffic laws completely — setting them aside just as effectively as if he were to repeal them.

Hoffman Makes Plea.

Concluding the third of five scheduled sessions, the seminar today heard a plea for increased safety on the highways from Harold G. Hoffman, former Governor of New Jersey and one-time commissioner of motor vehicles of that State.

"Horse power is developing more rapidly than horse sense" said Hoffman. "Lives are being needlessly sacrificed and we don't seem to be getting any nearer a solution."

He urged the visiting newspapermen to convey to their readers a word-picture of the tragedy behind highway accidents. He compared the every day slaughter on highways across the country with disasters like the Hindenburg explosion and the Morro Castle fire.

Arnold H. Vey, state traffic engineer of New Jersey, described the increasing trend toward scientific modernization of our roads. He told of projects designed to safeguard motor travel and said the time is coming when intersection crashes will be eliminated.

Plans for safety—similar to those now underway in Washington—were outlined by Vey in his discussion of engineering improvements for rural and urban thoroughfares.

Ickes Takes Red-Haired Bride Home to Be 'a Farmer's Wife'

Secretary Stops in Town Only to Praise Aides for Speedy Work in His Absence, Then Hurries Off to Md. Place to Rest From Trip.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Harold L. Ickes took his 25-year-old bride home to a Maryland farm yesterday after a month's honeymoon abroad.

The Interior Secretary and Mrs. Ickes stopped at his office en route home to congratulate aides in the speed with which they have started the new public works program.

Then they drove to Headwaters Farm, near Olney, Md., a 20-minute trip from Ickes' office. The 64-year-old Secretary did not carry his red-haired bride over the threshold.

Ickes, tired of seagoing, said he wanted to get into old clothes and rest at the 250-acre place before going back to work tomorrow.

Mrs. Ickes, he said with a grin, "is going to be a farmer's wife."

And they won't be home, officially, "until September 1."

The youngest Cabinet wife, her blue eyes smiling under a wide, navy blue hat, answered affirmatively when reporters asked if she could milk a cow.

"She wouldn't be so confident if she'd tried," her husband laughed. "I have."

The couple went directly to his office after arriving from New York by train. Ickes conferred with aides for about an hour.

He told them, a spokesman said, that they had done a fine job since he slipped away quietly to Dublin, Ireland.

The farm home to which Ickes took his bride is a white-pillared colonial residence which she helped him furnish.

'Babs' Hostess; Count Is Away, Baby Guarded

Heiress Gets Secret Court Decree in London and Fetes Friends.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 22.—American-born Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow entertained a large house party behind the steel shutters of her massive home tonight after obtaining a secret court order believed intended to protect her baby son, Lance.

The big gates of the Woolworth heiress' estate in London clicked shut after each guest was allowed to enter. Private guards questioned them carefully and scanned their credentials.

Count Lance Haugwitz-Reventlow, 2, slept in an air-conditioned five-room nursery suite behind steel grilled windows. Scotland Yard denied reports there was a kidnap plot against him.

Husband Away.

The countess welcomed her guests as the whereabouts of her husband, who left London suddenly two weeks ago, were unknown to close friends. It was believed he would return from the continent soon.

The London Daily Mail quoted the count as saying British police want to question him in connection with his wife's kidnap precautions, but he declared at his Paris hotel that he had made no threat to use force in gaining custody of his son."

The paper said it understood Barbara had been granted temporary custody of the child pending "subsequent litigation," and quoted the Danish count as saying "sharp differences" had arisen between himself and his wife over future education of their son.

Rift Rumored.

Rumors of a rift between the Haugwitz-Reventlows, who were married three years ago after the Woolworth heiress and the late Prince Alexis Mdivani were divorced, have been current from time to time.

It was believed the countess, in her sudden visit to Bow street court this afternoon, either had obtained a summon against the alleged author of a threatening letter or had applied for British citizenship.

It was pointed out that in the event of a martial rift she could forestall legal complications over custody of the baby if she were British. The countess renounced her United States citizenship last December 16 and adopted her husband's Danish nationality.

If the court order was a summons its nature would be known in about two weeks, when the answerable person would be required to respond.

2 Boston Lawyers Gives Selves Up in Trust Looting Case

New York, June 22 (AP).—Two Boston lawyers, indicted in the looting of investment trusts, surrendered at the office of District Attorney Thomas S. Dewey today as the Securities and Exchange Commission adjourned its investigation into the same transactions.

Germans Took Interest in U. S. Before Hitler

But Espionage Never Was Charged to Observers Admitted Here.

By Ralph Barnes.

Berlin, June 22.—The action of the Federal Grand Jury in indicting 18 persons on charges of espionage for Germany calls attention to the post-war German interest in the military establishmnet of the United States which goes back far beyond the rise under Chancellor Hitler of the Nazi war machine.

Evne under the Weimar republic, when the Reich leaders were still looking for the hand which would release their country from the military strait-jacket of Versailles, a German study was being made of the War Department's plans for economic and industrial mobilization.

It is no secret that more than a decade ago at least one German officer was dispatched to the United States in connection with study. Like the officers of other countries interested, he was given special facilities at the War Department for his work. The question of espionage did not arise, of course. Courtesies of this type are common in peace time though the War Department allows a more liberal policy than do the war ministries of some of the European powers.

Exchange Arranged.

Under an exchange arrangement, for example the German officers are at the "Command and General Staff School" at Washington, and American officers at Kriegs-Akademie here, but the British staff college does not collaborate in a similar arrangement with the Germans.

The German interest in the War Department's preparations for the so-called M-day derives from two factors. First, as pointed out in a semiofficial German pamphlet on the subject, the provisional American program in contrast to the majority of European powers, was to a marked degree public property.

As implied above, certain details at least which were not exactly public property could be had by persons who called with proper credentials at the War Department—including officers of foreign powers. Thus the main lines of the program in its early form were available for study.

Much Publicity.

The second was that, as the Germans point out, the United States did more than any other power in the early postwar period by preparing a paper for industrial mobilization in the early war.

The German study of the provisional American program was thorough, and undoubtedly the German military leaders have kept in touch with the revisions as they have been made. In magazine articles, pamphlets and public addresses, German spokesmen in this field, both military and civil, have given credit to the War Department for many of the ideas utilized in the formations of the vast German program for economic or industrial mobilization as it stands today.

Catholics Resume Fight for Religion In Filipino Schools

Manila, June 22.—Undaunted by the veto on June 4 by President Manuel Quezon of the Catholic-sponsored bill passed by the National Assembly for compulsory religious instruction in schools of the Philippine Commonwealth, Filipino Catholic bishops of the Southern Ecclesiastical District today sponsored a revival of agitation for enactment of a religious education law.

Meeting in Episcopal conference at Cebu and presided over for the first time by Filipino Archbishop Gabriel Reyes, the bishops approved a pastoral letter to priests of the Southern District urging Catholics "to bear down all difficulties" until religious instruction law had been approved.

Of Quezon's opinion that the measure was unconstitutional, the bishops wrote that his veto "unfortunately does not decide the constitutionality of the bill, for only the Supreme Court can pass on that."

Disney will attend the commencement at Harvard tomorrow, where he will be honored with another master of arts degree.

terday and pleaded not guilty. They were:

Johanna Hofman, 26, red-headed hair dresser on the liner Europa, who has been described as the "courier" of the spy ring.

Guenther Gustave Rumrich, former American Army sergeant, whose blundering tactics led to the downfall of the alleged ring.

Erich Glaser, German-born Army private stationed at Mitchel Field, Long Island.

Otto H. Voss, mechanic in an American airplane factory, charged with transmitting to Germany information relating to the defense of the United States.

The four were held in bail of $25,000 each and their trial set for August 1.

Guilty Pleas Expected.

Despite yesterday's pleas of not guilty, there was considerable reason to believe that, after jockeying for positions with the prosecution, at least three of the defendants will come in with pleas of guilty before the end of the ten-day period during which they may change their pleas. These three are Rumrich, who deserted from the United States Army and who has told investigators a self-damning story; Glaser, who has told his story before the special Federal grand jury investigating the case; and Voss, German-American mechanic at the Seversky Aircraft Corporation plant at Farmingdale, Long Island, who likewise is believed to have talked in the hope that his admissions might mitigate in his favor at sentence time.

The fourth prisoner, Miss Hofmann, apparently will fight the charges with a defense that she did not know the nature of letters entrusted to her to deliver nor the mission of the person for whom she was doing the service. The letters, addressed to Dr. Ignatz T. Griebl and other defendants, were found when she was arrested in February.

Just Shakes Her Head.

Miss Hofmann was represented at the arraignment by George Dix, attorney substituting for Harold R. Topken, of counsel to the German consulate here. She understood no English. After the indictment had been translated for her by Mr. Dix, the red-haired young woman shook her head in the negative, indicating her plea of not guilty.

Here in Washington Secretary Hull, made it clear that the State Department will make no representations to Germany on the matter. He said the case was one for the Department of Justice to handle. He added that, without intending to minimize or to magnify the importance of the investigation, he did not consider the case one to warrant intervention on the part of the State Department.

His remarks were taken to indicate also that, at least as yet, the German government has not complained to this Government on the indictment of German officials.

Hardy said that the grand jury's inquiry into the spy ring will be resumed Monday. It is expected to return a number of additional indictments, naming, among others, officials of a German steamship company held responsible for the escape of defendants and material witnesses.

$25,000 for Stories.

On a petition by Hardy, Federal Judge Murray Hulbert signed an order late yesterday directing the New York Post to show cause this morning why it should not be restrained from printing the articles, scheduled to begin today.

Turrou, highest-paid of the G-men, who headed the espionage investigation, announced his resignation Monday, saying he planned to write and join a private investigating firm. It was reported that he was to receive $25,000 for the spy articles.

Attorney General Homer Cummings, who conferred with Hardy yesterday, was represented as being concerned lest the Turrou articles jeopardize the chances of convicting the four suspected spies now in custody. Of the remaining 14, 13 are fugitives and the other is serving a prison sentence in Scotland.

J. David Stern, publisher of the New York Post, charged last night that the Government "is making an unprecedented attempt to erase freedom of the press from the Constitution."

He said he would fight back in Federal Court this morning.

London, June 22 (AP).—London newspapers said today that British secret service agents uncovered the first clews leading to the indictment in New York of 18 persons for espionage.

These versions said that information secured in the case of Mrs. Jessie Jordan, blonde beauty parlor operator, sentenced at Edinburgh, Scotland, May 6 to four years' imprisonment for espionage, had American ramifications and was turned over to Washington officials.

New York, June 22 (U.P.).—Sylvia Bradshaw, who was held temporarily in Shreveport, La., on May 26 on a charge of taking pictures of the Army airport there, sailed today for home on the Queen Mary.

Two detectives, assigned at the English girl's request, permitted no one to speak to her.

Drive on Jews Hits Nazis as Trade Suffers

'Aryan' Shopkeepers and Employes Complain of Economic Losses.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 22.—Evidence began to accumulate tonight that the violent antisemitic manifestations of the past week were proving a boomerang.

Many Aryan shop-keepers and Aryan employes in Jewish stores say they are economic victims of the Jew-baiters.

Movie houses in districts where raids have been the order of the day complain of half-empty houses. Not only Jews, but many Aryans, who dislike having the show interrupted and being subjected to inquiry, are staying away.

Business Suffers.

One picture house had only 18 patrons, instead of the customary 400. An Aryan barber complained his daily earnings for haircuts and shaves were half of what they were before the drive started. An Aryan pastry shop owner said he was considering going out of business, because he was operating at a loss.

In Jewish-owned department stores, an overwhelming majority of employes was Aryan or had become such since 1933. These people walk about with long faces, as they see either bankruptcy ahead for their firms or already hold notices in their hands.

Party Action Awaited.

The assertion last night by Propaganda Minister Goebbels that the party and state would take the solution of the problem into its hands was accepted by many as an implied admission that things could not go on as they had.

Goebbels told cheering thousands there would be new laws "to break Jewish influence soon" and to operate machinery to drive Jews from Germany with strictly legal measures.

[Meanwhile, the United Press reported that a vast "property pool" from the forced sale of Jewish holdings throughout Germany was understood to have been discussed among Nazi leaders, and might be announced at the Nazi Party congress at Nuremberg in September. —Editor's note.]

ish insurgent base at Palma de Majorca.

The destroyer was escorting the African Trader to an unreported destination, the admiralty said.

London, June 22 (AP).—The British government calmly ignored the sinking of more of her merchant ships in the Mediterranean today and continued to canvass the possibilities of a truce in Spain and early operation of her friendship with Italy.

Prospects of a Spanish armistice appeared to be dimming, but Prime Minister Chamberlain denied in the House of Commons that Italy, by current diplomatic negotiations, was trying to drive a wedge between Britain and France.

Hendaye, France (at the Spanish frontier) June 22 (AP).—Spanish Insurgents massed new munitions and warplanes behind the Catalan front today for a renewed offensive on Barcelona.

That stronghold of government power, considered by insurgents to be the "key to victory" in the civil war, was raided eight times today by 15 bombers. There were at least ten deaths.

Additional government resistance on the southern front before Valencia was believed by military observers to have inspired the insurgents to turn once again into Catalonia.

The new plan of campaign was kept secret, but it was confirmed that heavy reinforcements of men and materials had been moved into the northern front.

Intense heat halted action elsewhere.

Gibraltar, June 22 (AP).—Insurgent commanders were reported today to be making extensive preparations, backed by fresh Moorish troops, for a new southern offensive aimed at the southern port of Almeria.

The Spanish government news agency quoted an unnamed Moorish chief as saying Gen. Franco had 50,000 Moors ready to replace German and Italian troops, apparently in case the foreigners are withdrawn in consummation of British-Italian negotiations.

Maj. Doolittle Honored.

St. Louis, June 22 (AP).—Maj. James H Doolittle, formerly the United States Army's ace flier, tonight received the Spirit of St. Louis medal—highest award of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers given for the advancement of aviation.

Would you give a million to shake off that dull, dopey, played-out feeling that often comes with common constipation? Then stop a minute and think.
What have you had to eat this week? Just meat, bread, eggs, potatoes? Probably the reason you're constipated is you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean how much you eat. It means a kind of food that isn't entirely digested, but leaves a soft, bulky mass in the intestines which helps a bowel movement.
What to do? Eat some Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day. This crunchy toasted cereal is not only rich in "bulk"—it also contains both the intestinal tonic vitamin B_1 and iron.
Eat All-Bran every day and drink plenty of water. See if you don't get off your heels and on your toes! Kellogg's All-Bran is sold by every grocer.

New Overtures Of Peace Made In Chinese War

Negotiations Reported as Japanese Planes Raid Port of Swatow.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), June 23.—New peace moves to halt the spreading Chinese-Japanese warfare were reported under way today.

The reports came as Japanese war planes struck three times at the South China port of Swatow, threatening large-scale invasion of South China, and new Japanese-American friction cropped up at Nanking and Shanghai.

Emissaries of the Japanese-sponsored North China provisional government were said to be holding preliminary negotiations with representatives of the Chinese government of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek.

Third Party Held Necessary.

The German Transocean News Agency quoted Wang Chung Hui, Chinese foreign minister, as "emphasizing the usefulness of mediation by a third party, since China and Japan desire to terminate hostilities but neither is willing to take the initiative for reasons of prestige.

Wang also was quoted as declaring Japan must make the first overtures.

It was recalled that on Saturday the North China government issued a plea for peace, apparently with the approval of the Japanese army mission at Peiping.

In Shanghai, a Japanese Embassy spokesman declared Japan would "discuss peace with any Chinese government except that of the Kuomintang (Chiang's regime)."

Want Chiang to Go.

In what was regarded as an addition to "feelers" put out by both Chinese and Japanese, the spokesman said that "peace will be settled when Chiang disappears from the scene." He added, however, that "there is no room for third power mediation."

While Japanese massed planes and ships off Swatow, the United States gunboat Asheville stood by to protect Americans. Sixty-nine American men, women and children were reported to be in the Swatow consular district. The British destroyer Thracian was on its way from Hongkong to guard British interests.

At Nanking, John M. Allison, consul in charge of the United States Embassy, made representations to the Japanese regarding the slapping of J. C. Thompson, of New Brunswick, N. J., by a Japanese sentry.

F. W. Blackburn and J. D. Pase, American residents of Shanghai, were detained 40 minutes by Japanese at Garden Bridge, leading into the Japanese-occupied Hongkew section of Shanghai. They were released after United States consular authorities investigated. The reason for their detention was not given.

Chinese Take Offensive.

On the war front, Chinese matched Japanese action against Swatow with a new offensive in Shansi province, north of the flooded Yellow River area, where Japan's Lunghai Railway campaign was inundated last week.

Chinese troops were said to have recaptured Howma, strategic southeastern Shansi city. Japanese units were being rushed north from the Lunghai to cope with the Chinese thrusts.

Other Chinese troops along the Yangtze River were halting with machine-gun fire Japanese minesweepers attempting to clear the stream for an attack on Hankow, Chinese provisional capital.

"Steady Advance" Reported.

In their land drive up the Yangtze Valley, Japanese reported "steady advance" under cover of artillery fire, indicating that Chinese were entrenched in the hills and offering stubborn resistance.

The third Japanese air raid on Swatow virtually demolished the city's power plant and damaged the railway station. Swatow was dark throughout the night.

Japanese planes dropped leaflets stating continued resistance by South China would result in intensified aerial operations.

The invaders were said to have met only slight resistance in the occupation of Namoa Island, 20 miles east of Swatow.

35 Endangered.

By the Associated Press.

About 35 Americans were endangered by the Japanese aerial bombardment of Swatow, State Department dispatches disclosed yesterday.

Normally, there are 69 Americans in the Swatow consular area, of whom about 25 are in Swatow. An influx of some Americans from outlying towns has brought this number to 35 in the city. Most of them are missionaries.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull yesterday said diplomatic representations were being made to the Japanese government over the slapping of an American missionary by a Japanese sentry.

Dispatches to the department said Dr. J. C. Thompson, New Brunswick, N. J., connected with the American-owned Nanking University, was slapped while attempting to prevent the sentry from beating Thompson's rickshaw coolie.

5 Executive Representatives Named for Monopoly Quiz

Texas; Edward C. Eicher (Democrat), of Iowa, and B. Carroll Reece (Republican), of Tennessee. Only Eicher is a consistent New Dealer in this group.

The possibility of controversy within the commission as to procedure was raised with definite word from some of the Administration representatives that they believed they would be the active directors of the investigation. These six officials, according to this viewpoint, would constitute a sort of "standing committee" to direct the inquires through their departments or agencies. The full committee would sit at public hearings but the "digging" would be handled by the departmental representatives.

It was pointed out the six Federal agencies were directed in the joint resolution "to appear before the committee or its designee and present evidence by the introduction of documents and reports." Also the resolution provides that $400,000 out of the total $500,000 shall be expended "as the President shall direct among the department and agencies represented on the committee."

O'Mahoney, on the other hand, believes the whole committee of 12 should function as a unit although it might do some of its work through sub-committees.

The departmental representatives have assured businessmen they will approach the investigation with open minds. That is more than some of the Congressional Representatives are given credit for by these Administration appointees who perhaps refer to the O'Mahoney-Borah licensing bill. The majority of the Federal members are also reported to lean toward efforts to make business competition real rather than to extend governmental control over business.

Assistant Attorney General Arnold said yesterday that the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice had adopted an "open door" policy in an effort to encourage competition in business and industry. This means, he explained, that the division is willing to discuss at all times the problems of particular industries and such discussions already have been instituted in several instances. The anti-trust division, he said, has two tasks:

To prosecute criminal violations of anti-trust laws in all cases where there is sufficient evidence to warrant prosecution, and to build up competitive conditions looking to freer flow of commerce.

Arnold said he would continue to confer with industrial leaders in regard to the second of the two tasks and that any business man wishing to discuss problems affecting his particular field will be welcomed.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Civic Orchestra (Kurt Hetzel, conductor), opens the 1938 series of summer festivals at the Sylvan Theater. Program: "Sakuntala Overture" (Goldmark), Symphony No. 2 in D major (Haydn), "Rosen aus dem Suden Walzer" (Strauss), Overture to "Die Meistersinger" (Wagner).

Upon the enforced postponement of Tuesday night's official opening of the summer festivals at the Sylvan Theater may be blamed the small attendance last evening, when the Washington Civic Orchestra presented its delayed concert. Experience in previous years had led one to expect an assemblage filling the reserved section and crowding the sloping greensward at the southern base of the Washington Monument, for the outset of these open-air entertainments has usually been an occasion decidedly festive in character. But caution over possible showers evidently kept away many who would have otherwise been present.

Those who had confidence in fair weather were justified and enjoyed the program under a starry sky and in a balmy atmosphere. The one thing lacking was the contagious excitement of a throng to inspirit the members of the orchestra, but these faithful volunteer players did not seem to miss it, for their performance was as vigorous and enlivened as though thousands had been listening.

Dr. Kurt Hetzel, who has rehabilitated the orchestra during the past year, chose a program calculated to please a variety of tastes. To begin with, there was the "Sakuntala" overture of Karl Goldmark with its alternations of solemnity and rhythmic exultation. This was followed by an early symphony of Haydn, the D major, which is sometimes called the first and sometimes relegated to second place. No one knows the proper order of the first ten or more of Haydn's symphonies, and it is a matter of no great importance.

This particular symphony has the unmistakable Haydn characteristics of geniality, humor and lively wit. Its bright vivacity and unflagging energy put the audience in a friendly mood, and there were tentative outbursts of applause between the movements.

PWA Looses $88,731,128 in 'Priming' Fund

Spending

procedure designed to make it easier for banks to lend money for needed enterprises.

The Navy opened bids on approximately $40,000,000 in new ship construction, involving four destroyers, three submarines, three fleet tugs and propelling machinery for submarine tenders.

Before the National Association of Retail Credit Men in Pittsburgh, Assistant Secretary of Commerce Patterson said the "primary concern" of his department was to "see our system of free, private enterprise work, and that is the primary concern of most businessmen today."

The Farm Security Administration announced it would make long-term, low-interest loans to about 5,000 farm tenants, including 1,500 in the current fiscal year.

More Due by Week-End.

Yesterday's PWA allotments of $77,814,628 for 590 non-Federal projects covered school buildings, waterworks, grade crossings, hospitals, sewage plants, bridges, jetties, paving improvements and municipal and county structures. By the week-end, another $175,000,000 in allotments from the $965,000,000 PWA spending bill appropriation is expected to move.

Public Works Administration officials said yesterday's first series of allotments were expected to create 4,596,000 man-months of direct and indirect employment, and to require materials costing upward of $322,000,000. For every man-hour of work "on the sites," two and a half times as much work will be created in mines, mills and factories, they estimated.

"Their approval starts in motion the new PWA program designed to aid recovery," said a PWA statement. "Continuing the kind and type of PWA projects authorized in the past, they are designed to furnish wide economic stmulus to industry and employment."

"Will Act Promptly."

Assistant Administrator Gray said that "PWA will act promptly to keep up as fast a pace as possible" in continuing allotments.

In each case, the localities benefited assume 55 per cent of the total cost of projects, the remining 45 per cent being supplied by PWA.

Although the PWA ushered in the vast "spending-for-recovery" drive with yesterday's spurt of allotments, other Federal billions were being marshaled for use by the WPA, AAA, FSA, REA, FHA, CCC and other Federal units sharing in last session's towering "emergency" appropriations.

But business went on as usual at the Works Progress Administration, which has $1,425,000,000 to spend over an eight-month period to take up the job slack. The new appropriation will not take hold at the WPA until July 1, but officials said even then that any changes were likely to be "gradual." Since Works Progress Administrator Hopkins asked Congress for funds to meet growing unemployment, work relief rolls have been stepped up from 2,600,000 to 2,700,000. Before the summer is out they may reach 2,800,000, and in the fall and winter a 3,000,000-peak may be reached.

Favorable forecasts for business by Secretary Roper followed President Roosevelt's assertion in Hyde Park Tuesday that the business situation was not as bad as a lot of people believed it to be. Mr. Roosevelt is expected to amplify his own views generally in a fireside chat at 9:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Roper told reporters he did not mean to say that "business is yet on a great unobstructed highway." He said many obstacles existed, but "have been and are being removed and, with co-operation now on the part of all, a successful future will be found ahead."

Declaring that "economic skies are definitely clearing," Roper said natural economic factors coupled with last session's legislation, "point the way to an early favorable trend in the business cycle for which business should immediately make adequate preparation."

He argued that production and distribution of goods have been retarded by a "phychological fear recession," and that adjournment of Congress should have removed one of the contributing uncertainties. The relief bill, with its wide spending provisions; the tax bill, relaxing "tax strain on capital founds," and the wage-hour bill, "satisfactory even to opponents," will aid in starting the business movement, he predicted.

Roper particularly stressed reductions in wholesale inventories, and declared department statistics "clearly indicate that excess inventories, as one cause of the present depression, have been largely removed.

"The major part of this reduction in inventories in wholesalers' hands has occured since the beginning of February," he said. "Since that time the cost value of total wholesale stocks has declined approximately 9 per cent. Considering this decrease in conjunction with the decline in wholesale prices during these four months it appears that the physical volume of stocks has fallen off about 6 per cent over this period . . . Such a condition should result in the placing of new orders with manufacturers in anticipation of the usual seasonal increase in retail sales this fall."

Citing "further improvement" in the banking situation in the last calendar year, the annual report of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation showed deposits of $48,000,000,000 in 13,853 banks in 1937, of which more than $21,000,000,000 was insured.

"The average quality of assets was higher in 1937 than in recent previous years and the capital position of banks was well maintained," the report said. "Earnings of the banks were greater than in any year since Federal insurance of deposits and, according to available data, compared favorably with earnings of other types of business enterprise. Some individual banks, chiefly those which had not been successfully rehabilitated after the banking crisis if 1933, continued to be in an unsatisfactory position."

Five of Six Children Left Orphans by Mother's Murder

Post Staff Photos.

Middle-Aged Man Questioned In Washington Widow's Death

the Department of Justice. It was discovered she was Mrs. Esther Lewis, 31, of 1824 H street northwest. She was widowed and the mother of six children, and was employed as a charwoman at the Bureau of Printing and Engraving.

5 Women, 4 Men Hunted.

In addition to the Virginia man being questioned, five women and four men are sought. One man was seen in North Beach Friday night, fighting with a woman. A second the police said, was reported to have been seen in an automobile the next night near Lyons Creek, where Mrs. Lewis' body was found. He was struggling with a sobbing woman.

An intensive search of Mrs. Lewis' H street room provided the police with the names of the others, believed to have been close friends of the victim.

Circumstances surrounding Mrs. Lewis' death are still cloaked in mystery. The condition of her body ruled out the possibility of drowning, yet no marks of violence were found to explain how she was killed before being placed in the water. Police are awaiting the report of a Baltimore analyst which will indicate whether she was poisoned. They are also investigating the possibility of suffocation.

The dead woman's landlady—Mrs. Isabel Gravan Shelley—saw her for the last time Thursday when she left the rooming house to get her pay check. According to officials at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, she notified them Friday that she would be unable to report for work because of illness. When her superiors called her home Monday and Tuesday, Mrs. Shelley, in an attempt to protect her roomer's job, said she still was ill.

Identified by Restaurateur.

Another visitor to the undertaking establishment was W. J. Chaney, West Beach (Md.) restaurant proprietor, who positively identified the body as that of a woman he said had spent summer week-ends at the Chesapeake Bay resort for six years. She always was in the company of a tall dark-complexioned man, he added. Several years ago, he told the police, he saw her companion beating her in an automobile near his restaurant.

According to Montgomery County welfare officials, who knew Mrs. Lewis as a relief client for several months after the death of her husband in 1935, the woman attempted suicide two years ago. She was living then at Cabin John, Md. Shortly afterward she was forced to give up her household there and see her children scattered among private families in Maryland.

One daughter—Noela, 9—is in the Mt. Wilson Sanatorium with tuberculosis. John, 11; Esther, 10; Margaret, 5, and Bruce, 3, are living with an Olney (Md.) family. Lucille Cecelia, 2, was taken into a Rockville home. All are under the guardianship of the Farmers Banking & Trust Co., in Rockville.

Mexican by berth, Mrs. Lewis spoke with a decided accent despite the fact that she had lived in this country for many years. She was married in Los Angeles at the age of 18. Her husband, considerably older than she, was a veteran of both the Spanish-American and World Wars. He retired from the Army in 1921, four years before their marriage.

Soon afterward they moved from the West Coast to Maryland. Lewis worked as a guard at the State Department Building until his death, which was followed two months later by the birth of Mrs. Lewis' sixth child.

Her husband's war pension was discontinued when he died, and for a time she attempted to support her family on a $4-a-week relief allotment. Even after finding work with the Government, however, she was unable to maintain a satisfactory home for the children or medical treatment for Noela. After finding homes for them, she moved to Washington.

Purchased New Dress.

Cabin John friends, who saw Mrs. Lewis only two weeks ago, recalled her mentioning the fact that she had purchased a "new flowered dress." At the time of her death she wore a dark blue dress with a floral pattern.

The former Esther Lugo, Mrs. Lewis was born in Durango, Mexico, in 1907. She became a naturalized American citizen a few years ago. Maryland acquaintances, describing her jet black hair and fine features, agreed yesterday that she had been a great beauty before being overtaken by family cares and financial worry.

Acording to Mrs. Shelley, she never received callers at the house.

Labor Party's Terms.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 22.—The American Labor Party will not enter a coalition to support the Democratic ticket in New York State next fall, it was learned today, unless it receives one of the two nominations for the United States Senate and the post of Lieutenant Governor on the Democratic slate.

Those terms were outlined at conferences of Labor Party leaders, whose recent bid for recognition in the candidacy of Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, for the short-term Senate post, had received a severe setback in Gov. Herbert H. Lehman's announcement that he would seek the place.

Decision of the Labor Party leaders to demand one of the two Senate vacancies as a price of coalition with the Democratic Party led to speculation on the possibility of a third ticket next fall.

management of 848 banks was found to be unsatisfactory or poor last year.

These banks amounted to 11.6 per cent of the 7,293 State banks which are insured by the FDIC, but are not members of the Federal Reserve System.

Steagall declined to comment on recent differences between Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and the Federal Reserve Board over the form of bank examinations. The board and the Treasury reached an agreement last night, but details were not made public.

"Banks and the public generally are still suffering from the fear that arose in the last depression and once that fear is removed, the country as a whole will be better off," Steagall said.

He opposed Congressional proposals that the Government take over the Federal Reserve System.

The FDIC said in its annual report:

"Improvement in the quality of bank management is one of the major problems facing American banking . . .

"The great majority of banks are under good or satisfactory managements. The undesirable managements were found mostly in small towns, the report added.

It also said the capital of insured banks has increased $5,500,000,000 since the banking act of 1933. The added capital has been used to write off $3,500,000,000 of worthless assets, to repay $500,000,000 of RFC investments, and to pay $1,000,000,000 in interest and dividends. In 1937 alone, the capital account of the 13,853 insured banks increased $75,000,000 to $6,404,000,000.

During the year the corporation paid off 277,236 depositors in 178 insolvent banks which had total deposits of $76,000,000.

6,000 to Get U. S. Staff Jobs In Upturn Drive

sonnel and bureau setups probably will be used to a large extent, it was indicated. The Children's Bureau will have to enlarge its staff above the present 223 to handle child-labor provisions of the act. The old NRA code setup once reached a 6,000 personnel peak, but officials said the wage-hour task was not comparable.

Addition of approximately 1,500 employes, largely in the field, appeared in prospect at the Farm Security Administration, whose Washington staff has undergone heavy cuts recently. Congress provided $120,000,000 for rehabilitation loans and $30,000,000 for relief grants to low-income farmers through the Farm Security Arministration.

Reconstruction Finance Corporation rolls, cut sharply when their last lending activities ceased, are back in the neighborhood of 2,775, and new lending authority voted by Congress may result in a further increase of about 300.

The Rural Electrification Administration, authorized to lend another $100,000,000 for rural power lines, will need from 500 to 650 more workers, and more than 100 may be added at the Securities and Exchange Commission to handle that agency's new over-the-counter regulation and other duties.

The Federal Power Commission, with a staff of about 550 persons, may need up to 100 more in time in its regulation of the natural gas industry and other functions, while the Public Health Service, with new duties in control of stream pollution and diseases, may take an additional sanitary engineer and physicians.

Othre Personnel Plans.

Among the new agencies created, the five-man Civil Aeronautics Authority ultimately may take on as many as 500, in addition to those in agencies absorbed, while rough estimates of personnel needs of the new three-man Maritime Labor Board would indicate a staff of more than 150.

In addition, the Railroad Retirement Board, now staffed at about 1,119, to handle railroad workers' pensions, will need more help in connection with the new railroad unemployment insurance legislation.

Officials of the AAA said they already were up to limits on administrative expenditures under the farm act, and indicated the present personnel was adequate to handle new farm control powers and the task of distributing $212,000,000 in farm parity payments.

Many of those taken on in the so-called "pump-priming" agencies will have only emergency status during the rush of launching the $3,753,000,000 spending-lending bill.

Perkins was the son of Milo Perkins, assistant administrator of the Farm Security Administration. He was en route to Avery, Idaho.

Hamilton Bids For Coalition to Oust New Deal

Southern Republicans Told to Make Party Place for Democrats.

By the United Press.

Birmingham, Ala., June 22.—Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, of the Republican National Committee, today invited conservative Southern Democrats to join in a coalition drive to unseat the New Deal, but dismissed as "wishful thinking" and "unrealistic" all proposals to change the name of the G. O. P.

Addressing the Alabama State Republican convention, Hamilton emphasized that all opposition to the New Deal must be built about the G. O. P. He urged Republicans to make it "as easy as possible for Jeffersonian Democrats to join forces with us" by giving them a place in the party organization.

At the same time, however, he stressed that no concessions are to be made to the Dixie New Deal rebels "where fundamental principles" are involved. He did not enumerate or define these principles, but said that there "is today no insurmountable barrier between the real Democrats of the South and the Republican Party."

Relief Politics Attacked.

"The future welfare of the South, as well as the entire country, depends on getting rid of the New Deal and its spoilsmen as fast as we can," Hamilton said. "I say to you gravely and without partisan feeling that unless an end is put to New Deal policies, the economic and social problems of the South will become so aggravated as almost to defy a satisfactory solution."

He said the New Deal has given "ample evidence" that it proposes to use the new recovery-relief appropriation for political purposes. Administration leaders in both Houses of Congress, he declared, beat down every proposal to punish those who would use relief funds to play politics with human misery.

"It will succeed no more than it did in Iowa," he said, referring to WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins' indorsement of the candidacy of Representative Wearin, New Dealer, in the recent Iowa Democratic Senatorial race. Wearin lost the primary to Senator Gillette, Democratic incumbent, who broke with the Administration on the judiciary enlargement bill.

Cites "Feudalist" Speech.

Hamilton said the Democratic Party, under present control, is unsympathetic with the ideals, aspirations and economic interests of the South. He cited President Roosevelt's recent Georgia speech in which he attacked some Southern manufacturers as "feudalists."

Without mentioning them by name, he said the Administration has started a war of extermination against Senators George (Democrat), of Georgia, and Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, and other Southerners in Congress who have been true to the faith and have dared to vote their convictions.

"We saw in the last Congress Southern Democrats of noble lineage fighting shoulder to shoulder with Republicans in a successful effort to present the traditional form of American Government against the encroaching hand of those who would Russianize and Hitlerize our country," he said.

Cotton Experiments Hit.

"To those men of the South and many other patriotic Democrats who in that hour of national crisis placed principle above party, we gladly pay tribute. The South can be proud of those sons.

Hamilton blamed sagging cotton prices on New Deal experiments which he said have brought nothing but failure with disastrous effects for the South. Foreign nations have been encouraged to increase their cotton yield through the Administration's economy of scarcity and crop control policies, he charged.

"Let private enterprise have a chance to function as it should and we shall see workers marching into the factories, steel mills and offices," he concluded. "Then they will have money to purchase cotton and the cotton planter will have money to purchase the manufactured products of New England, Pennsylvania, Michigan and other States."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Shipbuilder.

Maybe it would be going too far to say that every man finds retirement a bore, that the work he did in his working years is forever before his eyes calling for completion or the last finishing touches that would make perfection. Anyhow . . . John R. Haskins, of 308 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., couldn't stand the retirement that came to him two years ago. So he busied himself with some flowers in the front and back yard; and this took time and a lot of attention and care. But it wasn't like work, the work in the Washington Navy Yard, where he had put in 34 years.

Flowers do certain things for you, but no one claims that they give a man the feeling of carrying on his work, the hard feel of work that goes into the making of ships and the delicate adjustment of the fine instruments that make ships move on the water and respond to a man's smallest touch.

Haskins started building a ship. It wasn't a square-rigger, whaler or the wind-jammers that are so popular in people's home parlors—the kind of ship with sails that makes the perfect land lubber see through the walls of his home into the long seas and the better adventures. Haskins began building a battleship, a model that would be so true that the best master builder could find no fault of design or pick a quarrel with the scale.

A few Navy men, of late, have been to his home and seen the model of the U. S. S. Texas and said it is the best they've seen. Haskins tells them it required a year of fairly steady work in the creation, and that he is satisfied enough with the result—and more than satisfied with what it did for him. It was like being in the Navy Yard all over again. All of his work has been perfected in the small ship and the hobby.

* * * *

The model is scaled one 16th of an inch to the foot. The hull is made of sugar pine, very soft, and it has to be handled carefully to avoid denting. There are 10 fourteen-inch guns, all rounded by a lathe to the scale; a tiny white seaplane with pontoon is poised on a catapult. There are a nest of boats on each side; four searchlights on a platform, a metal derrick, a navigation bridge, a flying bridge and chart house, a conning tower, a concentration dial—all the fixtures, fighting equipment, the tinest detail of the Texas is there.

Haskins knew the detail of a fighting ship. In his 34 years in the Navy Yard he learned of ships from bow to stern. What he didn't see in the blueprints, Naval officers told him. He had a responsible job. For 25 of the 34 years in the Yard, he was "leading man machinist," in charge repairing range finders, the delicate devices that regulate fire from the guns. The Navy, once, had this work done commercially, but found it too expensive. The men in the Yard could do it just as well. It was then that Haskins was called on the job.

He had known a lot about the subject, had seen the science grow. When he first came on, they were using open sights; then they went to telescopic sights, and now, of course, the gunners never see the target, it is all done by director work.

Now he is definitely sold on the idea of building models to while away all the spare time. And he is bothered because he knows of no place to exhibit his work. He feels that everyone is familar with the usual type of wind jammer and whaler that are to be seen in people's home parlors and that few people know what can be done in the building of a model fighting ship. They would learn, he says, that the fighting ship is tremendously more difficult to build because of the involved detail that has to be perfect—or nothing.

Now his mind is fixed on building a locomotive. It won't be a modern one, one of the ultra-streamlines. He wants to do a model of the better known locomotives, the old kind that would come thundering down the tracks, like some tremendous, agitated monster that emitted great billows of smoke and steam, that roared with its driving rods exposed as if intent only on roaring down and finally crushing the earth.

"I want to make a model of the older locomotive, the kind America traditionally knows, and grew up in awe of," Haskins says. And maybe with his small lathe, knives and other tools, he will capture in a model the image and the vast poetry of America's iron horse.

2 Heads on 1 Body Sleep and Ache at Different Times

Moscow, June 22 (U.P.).—Physiological observations of twin girls with one body, born last November, support the inhibitory theory that sleep results from a brain process rather than from fatigue and poisons in the body, scientists at the All-Union Institute of Experimental Medicine said yesterday.

The girls have two heads, four arms, two legs, a common bloodstream and but one trunk. They do not always sleep at the same time, however, thus supporting the theory of Ivan Pavlov, 1904 Nobel Prize winner.

(The inhibitory theory contends that the brain has areas of inhibition mixed with areas of excitation which keep the inhibitions from mastering the brain. Sleep occurs when the inhibitions master the excitation areas.)

The girls become ill at separate times, supporting the theory of Prof. A. D. Speransky of the institute regarding the importance of the nervous system in illness.

No Vacation for Hull and Aides

By the Associated Press.

Summer will be a period of crisis for Secretary Hull and his State Department aides. They will sigh with relief if it passes without conflict.

Vacations will be kept to a minimum to enable foreign service officers to stay in touch with fast-developing events in Europe and the Far East.

Summer in foreign affairs has been the most ticklish season for the last five years. The war in China began last summer and the war in Spain began in the summer of 1936.

Returning from Princeton University where he received an honorary degree, Hull said yesterday he would forego his customary vacation this summer and remain at his desk in Washington.

Famous Stars In New Roles For New Week

Film Plays, River Trips and Parks Promise All Manner of Diversion.

Luise Rainer, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young and Barbara O'Neil are cast in the principal roles of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Zoe Akins' screen play of "The Toy Wife," announced as chief feature of the bill at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The story is of the Deep South in the 1850s and is picturesquely staged and costumed. The pivotal character is a frivolous young woman whose irresponsible antics give rise to the title of the play. H. B. Warner and Alma Kruger are seen in character roles of importance. The bill will be completeed by short-reel subjects and "News of the Day."

"White Banners," latest best seller from the pen of Lloyd C. Douglas, as picturized by Warner Brothers, will be presented for the first time in Washington as foremost feature of the screen bill beginning tomorrow. The principal roles are played by Claude Rains, Bonita Granville, Jackie Cooper and Fay Bainter, with stellar honors easily gong to Miss Bainter for a particularly fine performance. The drama hinges upon the experiences of the residents in a small town in Indiana in 1919 and is one of uniform interest and power. On the stage, the vaudeville bill will be headlined by Odriana Caselotti and Harry Stockwell, the voices of Snow White and Prince Charming in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," with Rufe Davis, Sam Hearn and the Sixteen Dancing Sub-Debs also on the program.

The major film attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow will be "Three Blind Mice," a Twentieth Century-Fox production, featuring Loretta Young and Joel McCrea, with David Niven, Stuart Erwin, Marjorie Weaver, Pauline Moore, Binnie Barnes and Jane Darwell. This comedy-drama contains much of humor in its dealings with three young women inquest of wealthy husbands. The stage portion of the new bill will be headlined by Buster West and Lucille Page, two of the better dancers, in "The Fleet's In." The Chester Hale Dancing Girls will be held over for another week and other acts will round out the living entertainment. The bill will be augmented by orchestral overture and the Fox Movietone News.

A new child actress will make her bow to Washington audiences in the person of little Miss Janet Chapman, star of "Little Miss Thoroughbred," opening a week's engagement on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow. John Litel, Frank McHugh and Ann Sheridan lead the supporting cast. Also playing a small role in this picture is Betty Ann Garner, Washington protege of Stephen E. Cochran. The bill will be rounded out by the usual short-reel subjects and composite newsreel.

The "March of Time," devoted entirely to "Men of Medicine;" a Paramount Pictorial, "Autumn in the Alps," in sepia tints, and "The Orphan's Picnic," a cartoon comedy, will be the featured short-reels on the new bill tomorrow at the Trans-Lux Theater. The program will be based on complete newsreel coverage of the world.

"The Rage of Paris," first American-made film starring Danielle Darrieux, one of the most brilliant young actresses of the contemporary cinema, will continue for a second week at the RKO-Keith's. The principal male roles are played by Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Louis Hayward, with Helen Broderick and Mischa Auer leading the support. The auxiliary attractions also are being held over.

The Columbia Theater announces a repeat F street engagement of "Yellow Jack," as its chief screen feature for the week beginning tomorrow. Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce, Lewis Stone, Stanley Ridges, Harry Hull, Buddy Ebsen, Andy Devine and many others appear in roles of importance. Short-reels and "News of the Day," will be added.

Alexander Kordy's production of "Storm in a Teacup," adapted from the stage play of "Storm Over Patsy," will be the major offering at the Little Theater for the week beginning Sunday. This is the amusing story of the small mongrel dog that upset the tranquillity of an entire village. The comedy has been considerably sharpened and the whole fabric if the play strengthened in the camera adaption. Sara Allgood plays her original role and the cast also includes Ursula Jeans, Rex Harrison and Vivian Leigh, Cecil Parker and Patsy, the skye terrier.

An exciting mid-nineteenth century drama, "Plot and Passion," will be the bill at the Roadside Theater beginning next Monday night. It was written by Tom Taylor, author of "Our American Cousin," and marks a decided departure from the style of that familiar play. Paul Messink, Ralph Fowler and Betty Gray will head the cast.

The Wilson Windjammers, under the direction of Forney Reese, will provide the second summer festival of the season at the National Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds next Tuesday night at 8 o'clock, when they will be seen in "The Barker," the play of carnival life by Kenyon Nicholson. Valerie Turner, Larry Lawrence and Buck Barbee will head the cast.

Don Marquis' comedy of "The Old Soak" will be presented by the Cross Roads Theater, at Baileys Cross Roads, Va., as the third bill of its season, beginning next Monday night. Arch McDonald will appear in the title role, supported by a cast of well-chosen and well-seasoned players.

Larry Funk and his "band of a thousand melodies" are running up new popularity records in the Spanish Garden Ballroom at Glen Echo Park. The Crystal Pool also is coming in for its share of attention these early summer days and all of the other 50-odd amusement devices are in full operation. When weather permits the picnic grounds are crowded with family and organization outing parties.

The Wilson Line steamer City of Washington continues its daily schedule of trips to Mount Vernon and moonlight excursions down the Potomac River. On the moonlight cruises, stops are made at Marshall Hall, Washington's only river amusement park, where many new attractions have been installed this season.

With special music for dancing and spacious decks to accommodate its passengers, the S. S. Potomac of the Potomac River Line continues to provide a pleasant relief from the hurly-burly of the city. The moonlight cruises extend far down the river and return to dock before midnight.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Fay Bainter Scores Personal Triumph in "White Banners"

Film Version of Douglas Novel, Through Her, Teaches a Gentle Philosophy; Happy Outlook for the National; Fight Films; Theater Notes.

DR. LLOYD C. DOUGLAS, who abandoned the pulpit after a quarter of a century to reach a wider "congregation" through the fields of fiction, reveals a peculiar faculty for threading his novels with a vein of simple and, as he expounds it, workable philosophy of living happily and successfully.

BELL.

Furthermore, he possesses the gift of interlacing his sound preachments with characters and events that make for interesting and forceful drama. This already has been conclusively demonstrated by the measure of public approval that has been bestowed upon the picturization of two of his most popular works—"Magnificent Obsession" and "Green Light"—and now is further borne out by the homely power of "White Banners," previewed yesterday afternoon by another full roster of the drama desks.

"White Banners," as brought to the screen by the Warner Brothers, is an unadorned tale of life among middle-class people in a small Indiana city some two decades ago. It places no reliance upon elaborate settings or extravagant investiture, but is content to make its appeal directly to the mind and heart of all those who ever have lived outside the brick canyons of our largest cities. Even the most sophisticated of the confirmed urbanites will find it difficult to ignore the emotional and dramatic stresses recorded in this picture.

In fact, more than one in attendance at yesterday's preview was moved to wonder if, by chance, the Burbank studios had started out to make a "B" picture, only to discover as the thing progressed that here was a film which by every measure of simple and direct appeal belonged in the "A" bracket. Its production cost, obviously, was only a meager fraction of what usually is expended upon a "super" release. Yet, "White Banners" in many of its qualities is a distinctive and distinguished work.

This is due primarily to the exceptionally fine portrayal contributed to its capable ensemble by Fay Bainter, in the role of a defrauded mother who serves as the author's mouthpiece for a kindly and a tolerant patience with life and all about her. Miss Bainter is aided by no fine rainment or opulent surroundings in the achievement of the character's purpose. Her performance is made notable only by the sheer artistry and sincerety of a splendid actress who is able to project her message of helpfulness without the assistance of artificial stimulus to respectful attention.

There are other adult and juvenile characters who supply Hannah Parmalee an arresting background for her own gentle philosophies—all of which will be duly considered when "White Banners" is reviewed in detail on Saturday morning.

It may be permissible at this time, however, to point out that two of the most effective performances are turned in by Bonita Granville, who rapidly is developing into one of the cinema's most beautiful young women, as well as one of its most competent actresses, and Jackie Cooper, who here demonstrates that his work in "Boy of the Streets" was no "flash in the pan." Young Cooper bids fair to carry all of his boyhood pre-eminence through adolescence into young manhood.

I should say that any judicious picturegoer ought to want to see "White Banners" when it opens on the Earle screen tomorrow.

• • • •

I should say, too, that, prompted by curiosity if nothing else, anyone ought to want to hear Adriana Caselotti and Harry Stockwell, who headline the new week's vaudeville bill at the Earle. They were the voices of Snow White and Prince Charming in Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Miss Caselotti is a young Italian girl, whose voice is said to be like that of Conscience—so still and small that many "takes" and much amplification were necessary to secure a sound track of sufficient volume to suit the purposes of the Disney fantasy. The microphone will take care of that on the Earle stage. Harry Stockwell is more of a known quantity. He has been a singer at the Roxy Theater, in New York, and has done considerable stage and radio work, his most notable stage engagements having been in Earl Carroll's "Vanities" and "As Thousands Cheer." On the screen he was both seen and heard in "Here Comes the Band," with Ted Lewis, and M-G-M's "Broadway Melody of 1936."

As the "novelty" of his recent trip to New York gractually wears off, Manager Edmund Plohn, of the National, begins to let it seep out that the outlook is promising for a fine season of living drama on E street, come September. Helen Hayes, it seems, has decided to permit her home town to enjoy again the series of vignettes in which she appears in "Victoria Regina"—which opened here before it went into New York to become one of the contemporary theater's greatest successes—as an early fall attraction.

It has already been disclosed in this space that the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington contemplate an unusually interesting subscription season for 1938-1939, which also will get under way early. Mr. Plohn, therefore, contemplates complacently what at this distance appears to be a noteworthy season of solid bookings.

Then Mr. Plohn ruefully recalls that at approximately this time last year the same thing seemed to be true. And look what happened! During the early weeks of last season cancellations came in much faster than the promised attractions.

There are still those who believe that lightning never strikes twice in the same place—if that is of any comfort to him. And it ought to be, for he is one of them.

• • • •

Assuming, as this is written several hours before the event, that last night's embroglio between those two boys named Joe—one of them called Max Schmeling—came off as scheduled, official pictures of the heavyweight championship fight will be presented at Sidney Lust's Cameo Theater in Mount Rainier, Md., for a 10-day engagement beginning tomorrow afternoon. The film will be shown from noon until midnight, showing the entire bout, round-by-round and blow-by-blow, from ringside. The Cameo, incidentally, has just installed a modern air-conditioning plant and is the theater closest to Washington in which the fight films will be exhibited.

• • • •

A theatrical event of great sentimental interest is scheduled for July 16 to 30, 1938. It is the annual revival of the Central City Play Festival in the colorful old Opera House in Central City, Colo., the famous gold mining town that now comes to real life only on the occasions of these relightings of its celebrated playhouse.

The Central City Opera House this season will house a revival of Victor Hugo's melodrama of Old Spain, "Ruy Blas," designed and produced by Robert Edmond Jones, with music arranged and conducted by Waldo Williamson. Among the players who will participate in this resurrection of a glamorous and spectacular past will be Nance O'Neil, Helen Chandler, Bramwell Fletcher, Percy Waram, Tamara and William Sauter.

Lest it be thought that the metropolitan spirit of show business has not penetrated to the Colorado Rockies, be it known that opening night prices will range from $3.50 and $5.00, with following Saturday nights scaled at $2.50 and $3.50. All other performances will be $2.00 and $2.50.

Apparently there is still gold in them thar hills!

Hard-on-the-Thumb Note.

It is still a long walk to Central City.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., June 22.—When I came on "My Lucky Star" set, Sonja Heinie said: "Oh, I wish you'd come this morning! I did my solo number in four takes—was I lucky? The company expected it would take two days. I fooled them—went to a Turkish bath last night and felt so well, I wanted to fly."

HEDDA HOPPER

I can see them writing that into her next contract . . . One Turkish bath weekly for Sonja while on a picture.

But what I did see was the Alice in Wonderland ballet, one of the most exciting things ever witnessed. All characters are in the gayest colors. There was the Dodo bird, the Walrus, Peter Rabbit and the others; all expert skaters and dancers. I said: "What a shame they aren't doing this in color." "Isn't it?" Sonja said, "but I'll let you see mine when it's finished—see, it's being shot now."

So help me, there was Johnny Mescall doing it. After he'd set his own camera, he photographed the whole thing with Sonja's color camera on 16 mm film.

She lifted her skating skirt and said, "Aren't these pretty?" And was as proud of the ruffles on her panties as a prima donna is of her high Cs.

I asked her how her love life was coming on these days. With a naughty winkle and curtsey, she said, "Pretty good, thank you." And I'll be darned if it wasn't, for there on the set was Richard Greene, not working in the picture. And in her dressing room was Caesar Romero, who's been taking her everywhere for the last couple of weeks.

She had a little curl trouble. One fell off from the back of her bonnet, and got caught on the toe of her skate, which convulsed the company. No one laughed louder than Sonja.

Her stockings are specially made with seams on the inside instead of up the back, giving her nether ends that round, baby-like look.

Sonja looked at my hat and said, "Oh, I've got one just like that, but they wouldn't let me wear it—they said it was crazy. That isn't crazy—I'm going to get mine right away."

Then on to the "Down to Earth" set to say hello to Jane Withers, doing a scene with five men. She was supposed to kick one on the ankle. When the take was finished, the director said, "Kick him, don't pat him."

Jane said, "I was afraid I'd hurt him."

"Go on, I want you to." She did, then ran for first aid kit to bandage it for him. Jane's a Girl Scout. Never misses an opportunity to work on it and is aiming for a hostess badge.

Jane showed me her collection of Lincoln pennies and buffalo nickels. Clever way of accumulating a bank account, methinks.

Watching Jane were three little girls from Iowa, with their daddy. Each one was certain that she'd be a star like Jane.

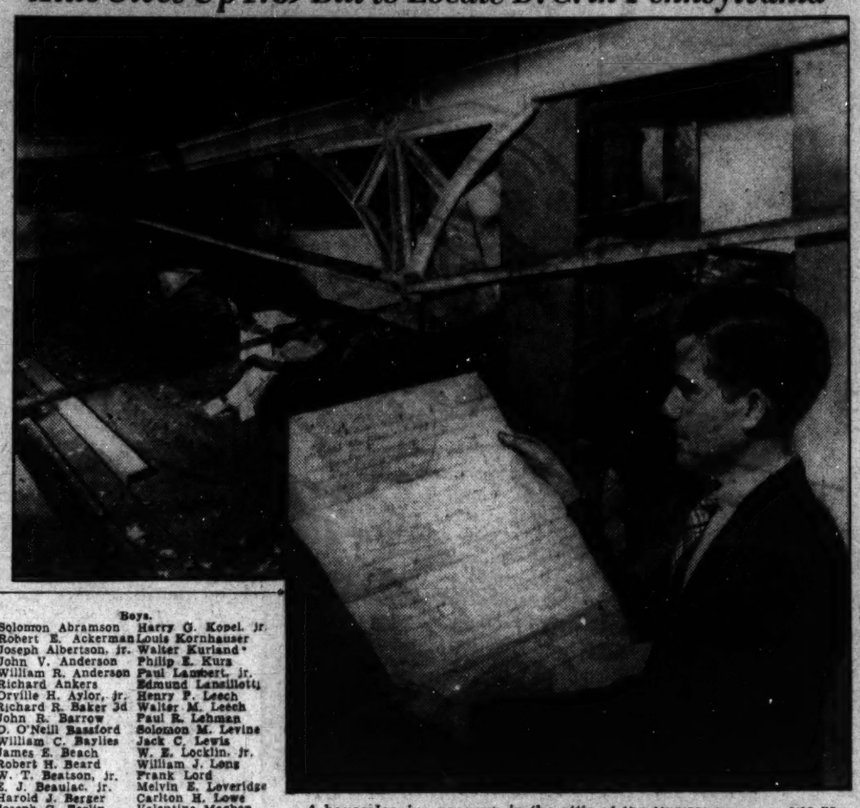
Attic Gives Up 1789 Bill to Locate D. C. in Pennsylvania



A housecleaning program in the attic of the Capitol shown above revealed a 1789 bill to locate the Nation's Capital on the banks of the Susquehanna River in Pennsylvania. H. Newlin Megill, assistant enrolling clerk in the House clerk's office, who suggested the "housecleaning" program to rescue rare documents, is shown holding the bill, which was passed by the House September 22, 1789.

Washington Narrowly Missed Location on the Susquehanna

The shelving of bills to permit a Congressional adjournment may cause many a heartbreak, but that custom, whether it was for good or bad, probably saved the National Capital from being located on the banks of the Susquehanna.

A unique housecleaning program, completed recently at the Capitol by H. Newlin Megill under the supervision of House Clerk South Trimble, disclosed a bill—thought to have been burned by the British in 1814—which shows by what slight margin we Washingtonians missed being Pennsylvanians—or practically that.

Megill is assistant enrolling clerk in Trimble's office. Yesterday he fondly surveyed the 1789 document, one of thousands rescued from destruction by heat, water and neglect, and speculated on the measure's fate when it was up for consideration at the very first session of the very first Congress.

"The amendments which were found with the original, hand-written bill, tell the story, up to a certain point," he said. "Providing that the Capital should be located in a 10-mile square in Pennsylvania, on the Susquehanna, the measure was passed by the House on September 22, 1789.

"Four days later the Senate gave its approval, with an amendment. On September 28 the House concurred in the Senate amendment but added one of its own. What happened then? We'd like to know."

Since the initial session of Congress ended on September 29, 1789, Megill's theory is that the Senate either balked at the House amendment or else neglected to consider it because the members wanted to go home. The amendment in question said:

"And provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect the operation of the laws of Pennsylvania within the district ceded and accepted, until Congress shall otherwise provide by law."

Megill, who lives at 423 Longfellow street northwest, came to the Capitol as a page 18 years ago. Sent frequently into the House file rooms, he became interested in documents—and the haphazard way priceless originals were treated—almost from the beginning.

Shortly before adjournment last summer he suggested a house cleaning to his boss. Trimble acceded with enthusiasm and saw that all necessary personnel and materials were placed at Megill's disposal.

Results have been splendid, Trimble said. Archives which no one knew still existed have been uncovered. Steps have been taken to preserve for posterity documents which rapidly were disintegrating.

Mass Is Set Today For W. J. McNally

Requiem mass for William J. McNally, who died Tuesday of heart disease at his home in Chevy Chase, Md., will be celebrated at 10 a. m. today at the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament. The Rev. Thomas G. Smyth, pastor, will officiate. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

A native of Cleveland, Mr. McNally entered the employ of the old Remington Typewriter Co. in 1888, and for years was manager of the typewriter division of Remington Rand. He was 67.

Mrs. McNally, the former Clara Humphrey, of Chicago, died here in November, 1936. Mr. McNally is survived by a son, Robert Humphrey McNally; a daughter, Miss Betty McNally, and a brother, John McNally, of Detroit.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills Adv.

Agreement On Spain.

Frequently stalled in its efforts to isolate the Spanish civil war and even, for long intervals, condemned to utter inactivity, the London non-intervention committee is now showing new and vigorous signs of life. As a result of agreement reached this week by Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Russia, the British compromise plan for the evacuation of "volunteers" fighting in Spain has a good chance of coming into actual operation.

Already the French government has anticipated application of the agreement by tightening the control on the Pyrenean border so as to prevent the shipment of arms, munitions and implements of war to either Spanish faction. While this is certain to work hardships on the Barcelona government which, during recent months, has received a large volume of indispensable war supplies by way of France, the effects may not, ultimately, prove one-sided.

Having taken this step France can now insist that Germany and Italy also refrain from sending any further supplies to Gen. Franco and to begin the withdrawal of their "volunteers" from Spain. Should the Fascist powers balk there is nothing to prevent the Daladier regime from reversing its present stand.

British pressure was largely responsible for the closing by France of the Pyrenean border. The same pressure is now being applied to Italy to help make the evacuation plan a success. And since the Anglo-Italian agreement of last April does not go into effect until after the Spanish problem has been liquidated, Mussolini may feel under compulsion loyally to carry out the British scheme. There is thus a possibility that before the civil war enters its third year the non-intervention agreement of August, 1936, may finally be carried out.

It would be unwise, however, to ignore the obstacles that still remain. The consent of both the republicans and the nationalists must yet be secured, to the dispatch of an international commission to count the foreigners fighting in Spain. The circumstances that, once withdrawal has really got under way, belligerent rights would be accorded to both sides may prove unacceptable to Barcelona. Franco may be equally loath to lose his Italian and German allies, without whose help his progress would have been even slower. And now, as at all times since the Spanish conflict began, there is the possibility that bad faith by one or more powers may make the present agreement valueless.

On the other hand, should the British plan go into force it may easily pave the way to a truce between the combatants. This is what the Chamberlain government is anxious to bring about and for which it has universal goodwill. Certainly it is now clear that all Spaniards and all civilization, would gain by a negotiated settlement of the ruinous civil war.

Pension Bill Vetoes.

President Roosevelt's vetoes this week bring the total number of bills he has rejected since 1933 to more than 280. Only one other President has blocked a greater number of legislative measures approved by Congress. During his two full terms President Cleveland vetoed 344 bills. Mr. Hoover stands in third place with 75 vetoes in four years.

By far the greatest number of vetoes used by recent Presidents have struck down bills to pay special claims against the Federal Treasury. Like all other Chief Executives since Cleveland, President Roosevelt also has a good record of vetoes against measures awarding pensions, bonuses and other special benefits to war veterans. Such bills are frequently passed by politically-minded Congresses on the assumption that the White House will take the responsibility of defeating them.

In his recent group of vetoes the President struck down two bills that would have made unreasonable gifts to certain groups of veterans. That action was thoroughly justified because of the enormous deficit already in prospect and because of the discrimination these bills would have injected into the pensions system.

It is difficult, however, to arouse any enthusiasm over the President's defense of the budget in cases of this sort. The saving of a few million dollars thus effected seems insignificant when the Government itself is sponsoring a program under which billions will be distributed. That is one reason why the Administration's pump-priming venture is essentially dangerous. It encourages every group to assume that it is entitled to special benefits from the Federal Treasury, and subjects to heavy discount the sporadic efforts of the White House to economize.

Short-Sighted Wage Policies.

Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, has often stressed the identity of interest between the railroads and their employes. A flourishing railway industry provides excellent employment opportunities; a bankrupt industry cuts costs by dismissing workers and putting them on part time. This is the elementary fact which Mr. Eastman has done his best to hammer home.

If the representatives of rail unions are wise, they will remember Mr. Eastman's advice when they meet with spokesmen for the carriers to discuss the proposed wage reductions. A unified regulatory system, relating wage policies to rate regulation, would no doubt have prevented the present financial crisis from reaching such an acute stage. Labor would earlier have realized that high and rigid wage schedules are not an unmixed blessing.

Railroad labor has actually paid dearly for its success in bringing current rates of pay to the peak level of all time. Unable to cut wage rates the roads have dismissed workers. Obviously these dismissals are due primarily to the declining volume of traffic, but they have been greatly accelerated by the pressure of excessive labor costs.

The result is that in May railroad employment as a whole showed a decrease of over 21 per cent from the level of a year ago. For maintenance of way and structures alone the reduction in numbers employed amounted to nearly 29 per cent. The significance of the latter figure is brought home by the recent terrible railway accident in Montana. That may have been unavoidable, but it nonetheless emphasizes the dangers of enforced economies that create unusual traffic hazards, for employes of the roads as well as passengers.

No well-informed student of the situation believes that a solution for the roads' present plight can be found except through increased revenues and decreased operating expenses. As business revives, income will improve. But even in 1936—a comparatively good year—the roads as a whole, earned only 2.58 per cent on their property investment. Toward the close of 1937 their condition rapidly deteriorated and during the first four months of the current year, earnings actually averaged only 0.44 per cent on the investment.

To suggest in face of such a showing that a remedy lies in scaling fixed charges is utterly unrealistic. Neither the ICC nor the Splawn committee, which recently reported to the President, considers fixed charges excessive. As Mr. Eastman says, the idea that the roads are all overcapitalized confuses the symptom with the disease. Furthermore, about one-third of the railways are already in the hands of receivers and for the time being have been largely relieved of the necessity of meeting fixed charges. In any case, the right of the holders of railway securities to a reasonable return on their fair value of the property has to be recognized if the roads are to survive under private ownership and management.

When investors are deprived of all incentive to purchase railway stocks and bonds, the Government will be compelled to provide the funds for continued operation. But transfer to public ownership would merely shift the burden of finding a solution to the shoulders of Government officials. They would have to decide whether wages should be cut, or debt charges scaled, or subsidies for the roads provided at the expense of taxpayers. Since political opposition to wage cuts would probably be irresistible, and since the debts would be government obligations, the taxpayer would almost certainly have to stand the cost of subsidization.

That of course may be the solution of the present dilemma for which the railroad labor leaders hope, despite protestations to the contrary. But whether or not Government ownership is their aim, it is likely to be the final result, if the unions steadfastly refuse to adjust wage rates to the changing financial conditions of the railway industry.

Value Of Fingerprinting.

The mystery that has thrown placid southern Maryland into a furore has shown sudden signs of clearing. The body found floating in Lyons Creek at Prince Frederick has been identified.

By extraordinary efforts of experts, fingerprints were obtained clear enough to be compared with those filed with the Department of Justice. Because she was once employed by the Government, the unfortunate woman's Bertillon identification was among them. It may now be possible to trace her last movements and deduce the precise means of her end—and if it was murder, to pick up the trail of her assailant.

Here is excellent confirmation for the point persistently stressed by J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, that every man, woman and child in the land submit fingerprints to his bureau as an aid to identification in case of accident or amnesia. Many, detecting an OGPU aroma in the suggestion, have opposed the idea. Nor have their objections been entirely unfounded, world morals being in their present uncertain condition.

On the other hand, those inclined to travel and those living in large cities such as Washington, where identities are easily submerged, will have a difficult time discounting voluntary fingerprinting in the light of the amazing identification of Esther Lewis.

To Restore The Canal.

Government acquisition of the historic Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, now soon to be fully consummated, will make available to Washington one of the most delightful and unique playgrounds to be found in this or any other country. With the return to the Capital of Secretary Ickes, whose personal interest in restoration of the canal is known to be keen, it may be hoped that progress in the undertaking will be expedited.

In April, a month before his wedding in Ireland, the Secretary aroused much local enthusiasm by making public his intention to restore the lower reaches of the canal for canoeing, boating and fishing purposes. Since then the legal difficulties of the transfer from the RFC, which holds the property as collateral for loans to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, have been largely overcome. The railroad is glad to relinquish its rights and the RFC is prepared to turn the canal over to the National Park Service, for development as a WPA project. Only establishment of a clear title along the 186-mile waterway to Cumberland impedes actual start on the work of restoration.

Secretary Ickes' announcement last April contemplated restoration of the canal, including tow path, locks and lockhouses, to a point between Seneca Creek and Point of Rocks, meaning a stretch of 22 miles from Georgetown. In view of the enactment of the Recovery-Spending Bill, however, there seems no reason why this very meritorious WPA project should not be enlarged. Restoration of another section about as long as that already planned would make the canal again navigable to Harpers Ferry, a far more logical and interesting terminus than Seneca Creek.

Washingtonians who knew the canal prior to its abandonment, in 1924, will be unanimous in urging its restoration. Whether for walkers along the shady towpath, for canoeists on its always tranquil surface, or for less energetic fishermen, the section between Washington and Great Falls was a year-round mecca. The more adventurous would go for week-end or longer trips farther up the waterway whose course is said to have been planned by George Washington, and which traverses a countryside unparalleled both for beauty and historic interest.

Today the canal can easily be made even more attractive than it was in the memory of many local citizens who still feel themselves young. Its bed could be improved and the water kept unpolluted so as to encourage swimming, thus saving the lives which are taken every summer by the adjacent but treacherous Potomac. The picturesque canal boats could be brought back for excursion purposes and income from this, plus modest lock tolls, would probably cover most if not all the overhead involved.

The project, moreover, has aspects larger than the canal restoration, pleasant as that would be. It involves making the entire right of way, stretching to the river shore for most of the distance to Cumberland, into a National Park of the "strip" variety. This will mean public access to the numerous scenic spots along the upper river, at present completely inaccessible and largely unknown, in spite of their propinquity to Washington.

Some have suggested that the old canal bed be turned into an automobile highway. Such a change, along this old-world, peaceful waterway, would be close to sacrilege. Roads can be built anywhere but there is only one C. & O. Canal. The opportunity to restore it as a WPA project, under the National Park Service, is unrivalled. Washingtonians, to a man, will be behind Secretary Ickes' plan to revive, and improve, what is potentially the Capital's greatest recreational asset.

Jarring Trucks.

Suspicion of shoddy construction at Cardozo High School seems unjustified. Preliminary investigation indicates that the ceiling which fell on a commencement throng there had simply been jarred loose by the heavy traffic which has come to be customary along Rhode Island avenue at that point.

Other schools, notably the Franklin School at Thirteenth and K streets, have had similar experiences, though fortunately no one has been injured except at Cardozo. Householders living along main traffic arteries have also found that plaster laid on old-fashioned wooden laths crumbles quickly when exposed to the incessant tremors set up by heavy commercial trucks. An equal strain, of course, is imposed on human nerves by the noise and shaking.

As school buildings come up for replacement they can be and are being relocated away from the principal highways along which through traffic is routed. Unfortunately the many residents who find their properties now facing such boulevards as Rhode Island avenue cannot all be moved. Their best hope is the early realization of by-pass plans to divert transient traffic around the outskirts of the city.

Now "China's Sorrow" is inundating many square miles of land, drowning thousands of people. It seems that China forever lies in the dark shadow of Fate's largest and blackest eight-ball.

There's always something. The radio comedians are packing their jokes in mothballs and retiring for the summer, but their places are being taken by taurus-tossing candidates.

Mexico's Barnyard Brawl.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Your Mexico City correspondent, Jeffrey Paul, in The Post of June 18, makes a barnyard brawl of the late rebellion in the state of San Luis Potosi. Choosing to retire rather than fight the federals, the cacique, Gen. Cedillo, probably averted plunging the country into civil war.

Mr. Paul stresses the fact that President Cardenas acted promptly and efficiently; also that the alleged "Cedillo-Fascist hookup" was only a newspaper canard, deceiving only certain interests whose properties might have been returned at the cost of much bloodshed if Cedillo had succeeded.

It is often impossible to interpret the day-to-day events below the Rio Grande from reading news reports, but your correspondent's timely and lucid comments correctly appraise the situation. Mexican political and economic problems are of immediate concern to us.

The hands-off attitude of the United States, in spite of the strain on the good neighbor policy resulting from the petroleum expropriations, may prove more beneficial in the long run than was at first apparent. To Mr. Hull must go the credit for initiating a new era in our Latin American relations.

Americans In Need.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
This is just a line to call to the attention of Americans the pitiable state of some 200 or 300 wounded American boys who have been discharged from the International Brigade in Spain as permanently incapacitated.

May we say that this is a situation which is, above all, humanitarian, and in its essence has nothing to do with politics. These are American boys, mostly of American ancestry, who volunteered for service out of an idealism which is innately American. They are boys out of any "home town" from every part of the United States. They might easily be our own sons, brothers, or cousins. Some of them are.

They have no clothes, improper food, no cigarettes, and only the most rudimentary medical care, even in the case of shell-shock, gangrene and head injuries. Some 20-odd are already in France, but no more will be allowed to cross the border until some provision is made for those already in France. A number have already been kept waiting on the Spanish side of the border for weeks. A number of gravely wounded, awaiting evacuation, were submitted a few days ago to fresh shock, horror, and injuries at Figueras, when that hospital center was bombed by Italian planes. As much as could possibly be done has been done already by individuals, but much more money is needed.

The appeal is made to the emotions and convictions which are above politics. These boys are Americans. They are young. Most of them are of the best traditional American stock. But above all, they are suffering human beings in a pitiable state. They have lost identification papers, and a period of weeks may be necessary before they can be shipped home.

The American embassies and consulates in Barcelona and Paris are doing all in their power to expedite the paper work necessary for the repatriation of the wounded.

No provision has been made, or can be made, by the United States Government for the transportation home of these wounded, save by act of Congress.

The Emergency Committee for American Wounded from Spain is now established with offices in the New York Herald Tribune Building, 21, Rue de Berri, Paris. The committee is entirely nonpartisan, nonpolitical. Its expenses are entirely paid by its members. Whatever money is contributed will be used directly for the aid, comfort, and medical care of wounded Americans arriving in France from Spain. Whatever American citizens can do to help will constitute an evidence of simple Christian feeling.

The Wolf From The Door.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
In a letter in The Post, Mr. Walter Bahnsen's blast against President Roosevelt and the New Deal makes him sound like one of the "60 families."

He writes about holding companies and frozen capital. Does he include the watered stock in utility corporations that electric current users must pay dividends on.

He should know that all that kept the wolf from the door of millions of homes was the work on schools, postoffices, courthouses, bridges, roads, sewers and other Government projects, as bumper crops, low prices, mills running at 26 per cent capacity produced more than the demand increased the number of unemployed.

The Dog Debate Continues.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I have been much interested in the many letters recently in The Post about the numerous dogs in Chevy Chase. They have long been a terror and an annoyance to me, too.

People undoubtedly have a right to have dogs, but not the kind of dogs that won't let innocent persons walk by their house without accompanying them down the street with menacing growls, loud barkings, and baring of teeth. This condition has resulted in my practically giving up ever walking along the beautiful streets of Chevy Chase.

It seems a most unfortunate condition that in a civilized community where the streets and sidewalks are erected for the benefit of the public that we are almost confronted with the dangers of wild jungle life, simply because dog lovers insist upon keeping cross dogs for pets.

After all, a dog is only a dumb animal at best, and should, of course, like all other dumb animals, be treated with kindness, but to eulogize the dog the way these people have in their letters is not only foolish but ludicrous. Anyone will admit that there is no finer animal than a well trained, intelligent, nice dog; but he can be the most obnoxious beast and disturber of the peace in the hands of people who let their dogs run all over them as well as run all over people to whom a dog is only an animal and not a household god.

ANIMAL LOVER.
Chevy Chase, Md., June 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I contend dogs, like most animals of a disturbing nature, should be in wide open spaces. I was raised in the country and we always had a dog. He was not a parlor ornament, and they do not belong in city apartments and two by four back yards. On the street next to mine, are duplex apartments, with a very small back yard used by both families. There are at least ten different species of mongrels within an area of 200 feet. They sleep under the tiny back steps and the slightest noise starts them all yelping for hours. Apparently they all insist on having the last bark.

Some of these ardent dog lovers should come home tired and try to sleep listening to that silly symphony for several nights. Their range is almost perfect, from a high soprano to a deep bass. I find people who insist on keeping dogs have very little consideration for the peace of their neighbors. If it sounds like music to their ears, I wish they could confine the noise to their own back yard.

If we are to live in peace and harmony as a big human family, why not bury the dog hatchet? I like dogs, but I refrain from putting one in my back yard because I don't want to annoy my neighbors. It isn't being kind to confine a dog to such a small area and then punish him when he jumps the fence or sneaks out for a little freedom when the gate is accidentally left ajar.

RUBY G. CROTINGER.
Washington, June 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I read with much amusement an effusion in your columns of June 20 by "Real Dog Lover." He or she presents the same old ineffectual argument used by persons who are resentful of having the truth known. The party in question admits loving his dog and goes on to tell why, which is an entirely selfish reason, of course.

If dog lovers would be content to be just that, and not try to sway everyone else to their side, and try not to render themselves obnoxious to others—well, that would be the end of the whole matter. No one cares about how many canaries, or fish, a person keeps, because they do no harm to anyone. Dogs, however, cannot be kept out of sight, and others in the neighborhood should be considered.

Dog lovers, so called, always bring up that old stuff about God creating all things. Well, so what? He also created flies, gnats, snakes, skunks, etc., but are we compelled to love them for that reason alone? And incidentally, a dog is a friend to whoever feeds him, and ordinarily one master is the same as another. Who in the world ever heard of a dog appreciating a home? That's a lot of silly talk.

People move to the suburbs to get away from the noise and bustle of the city, only to find that all their neighbors are keeping one or more dogs to torment them. If you object you are accused of everything but murder. You are classed as selfish, cruel, crazy, and so on, just because you wish a little peace and quiet, and ask others to respect your feelings a little bit.

The whole thing simmers down to this—no one on earth could object to a person owning a dog that is not dangerous, does not bark unduly, or run at large. In other words, no one can justly complain about something that does not concern him. However, when silly, selfish owners haven't the brains to handle their dogs correctly, then a person has a legitimate reason for complaining.

RAYMOND NEWMAN.
Washington, June 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Thanks for the words of the "Real Dog Lover."

It is too bad that there are those who are so lacking that they cannot see the good qualities of our dogs. I talk real dog talk. If I meet a stray dog and say a few words his sad attitude changes, his tail wags, and he says to himself "By Geo! Here's some one to hang on to"—and there is a new dog in the family.

One of my dogs had never seen me in swimming and when he saw me paddling around in deep water—what did he do? He rushed into the water, swam out to me, grabbed me by my back hair and did his little best to drag me to shore. Everyone laughed, and he was quite crestfallen. After that he sat on the shore and would not look at me, as if saying, "Very well, if you will be a darned fool." But he always stayed near.

I fell down and slipped on a rug another time. I broke a bone. I called, but no one heard. A small bulldog I had rescued from the street (who seldom barked) went down stairs and barked furiously at the cellar door until the maid came up to see what the noise was about.

Put that under your hat, "Non-Dog Lover."

Again, with still another dog, I took a long walk. I sat down in a shady spot by the trail, while the dog hunted around. When he came back he leaned upon me, made a funny sound and scampered down the trail. Then he stopped, looking back. I said, "Now, see here, if you want to go home for a drink, it's just too bad. Lie down, compose yourself." But he kept right on acting that way. Finally when we did go home I found he was not thirsty. That afternoon, right behind where I was so blissfully contemplating nature, the body of a man who had killed himself was found. Wasn't that a smart dog? He knew that was no place for a lady, however romantic!

The Post Impressionist

Tonsorial Taciturnity.

AT THE risk of branding myself a reactionary, I wish to mourn the evolution of barbershops into tonsorial parlors. No longer are these the friendly meeting places of 20 years ago, where a man could let down his hair, and obtain with his service, racing tips, political forecasts and a faintly improper thrill from the Police Gazette.

That the turtle-necked spittoons and the individual shaving mugs should give way to progress, I suppose had to be expected. However, I cannot permit the barber to change from a genial man of many words, into a silent, haircutting automaton, without raising my voice in lament.

Recently I entered a bustling, prosperous shop and chose one of the many chairs. Though I gave the attendant a cheery greeting as I took my place, he only nodded and spun me so that I faced a sign which read: "Notice your barber sterilize brush, comb and wash his hands before touching your hair."

The man performed these functions in the order named and then turned me toward a second banner. "A fresh towel and clean apron is used for each patron." As per schedule, the barber took fresh linen from the cabinet.

To start the conversational ball rolling, I said, "Please notice that I washed my hair before coming in to have it cut."

Without laughing or commenting on my quip, as an old-time barber would have, the man confronted me with still a third sign. "Our barbers are instructed not to high pressure customers in any way."

This restriction seemed to ban all conversation on the part of the barbers. Except for a few professional questions, there was no talk in the entire shop, and only the mechanical snip—snip—snip of the scissors broke the mortuary silence.

It used to be fun to have a haircut or a shave. Even before my family accepted my whiskers as other than an object for mirth, the discerning barber saw them as a matter for solicitude, and always asked if I wanted a shave. And always I did.

These first shaves and the manner in which the barber talked to me as an equal, asking my opinions as soon as his soap prevented my expressing them, did more to usher me into manhood than any other one thing.

By the very nature of their business, barbers should be conversationalists. While being serviced, their clients cannot read conveniently, nor can they talk without risking a mouthful of soap or hair. And yet, if the patrons are left to their thoughts, they are apt to be bored, and even, when the razor scrapes their throats, depressed by somber intimations of personal mortality.

Despite the many jokes ridiculing talkative barbers, there is ample historic precedent to excuse their garrulity. In ancient Athens the barbershops were the news centers of the town, and probably the scene of as many instructive arguments as the agora or the lyceum. At such a shop the Athenians first heard the news that spelled their downfall—the loss of their expedition against Syracuse.

A wandering sailor entered the shop, perhaps for a haircut or to have his beard curled and perfumed. He asked, by way of passing the time, how the Athenians were taking the destruction of their fleet and army. Picture his surprise to find they knew nothing of it, and his terror to find himself regarded as a spy and spreader of false rumors. He was cast into jail and released only when confirmation of the report reached the city.

Barbering is mentioned in the Bible, and Pliny saw fit to record that the art was introduced into Rome in the year 454 after its founding. He likewise notes that Scipio Africanus, the conqueror of Hannibal, was the first to have a daily shave.

Caesar's barber is described by Plutarch as a "busy, listening fellow." This might seem, perhaps, to confute my argument that the ancient barbers were talkers, had it not been that everyone was a "listening fellow" around Caesar.

Oliver le Dain would never have worked himself into the good graces of Louis XI, by clipping the royal whiskers in stony silence. On the contrary, seizing the opportunity to talk, while the King could do naught but listen, the barber so wisely expressed himself he was soon the chief counselor of the monarch.

In 1609, William Rowley described a barber in this fashion: "Hee, hoping to attain some discourse for his next patient, left his basins swinging in the ayre, and closely eves-drops our conference."

And if further literary sanction is needed, the Barber of Seville supports my theme both in play and in opera. Figaro is a most delightful character, and certainly does no harm to his profession, or to the entertainment of others, by talking incessantly.

It is true, no doubt, that a barber can work faster if he does not talk, and more painlessly, if he has no occasion to gesture with his razor hand; still I, for one, am willing to sacrifice both time and skin for the sake of a little conversation with my shave and haircut.

The Once Over

The King Of The Month.

It was quite a treat the other day to have world attention called to a ruler who has been on the job 30 years and never been caught roaring, ranting or rabble-rousing. People read about him and couldn't believe there was a seasoned ruler anywhere who still was going strong on a nonbellowing basis.

• • • •

Old King Gustav of Sweden is the man. He's been head man of the same country for more than 30 years, which must be some kind of record. And he hasn't had to purge, shoot or deport anybody to hold the job.

• • • •

Here's a ruler who has never appeared in a newsreel with his fist clenched!

• • • •

A monarch who doesn't pad his chest, make terrible facial grimaces, thump the table or spend any time whatever in sound-wagons, on balconies or issuing long orders concluding with "or else"!

• • • •

A head man who does not count the day lost unless he has challenged some friendly nation to step outside, announced a new type of death ray or invented a salute!

• • • •

A national chieftain who hasn't shown the slightest interest in wholesale murder! A ruler who can be happy whether or not there is a microphone in the room!

• • • •

• • • •

There must be something. We've been back over the record and we can't find where Gustav of Sweden ever ordered the women to have more children, burned the country's best literature, bumped off a lot of national notables in an overnight trial or invaded another country for its own good.

• • • •

Gustav doesn't even goose step!

• • • •

And what's the result? His people love him and none of the neighbors are planning to shell his country. The Swedish people presented him with $1,000,000 as a birthday gift. And he indorsed it over to a fund for cure of infantile paralysis!

Valedictory

Address To Class Of 1938.

President, Dartmouth College.

WITHIN YEARS since the turn of the century seniors have been rueful that life had become so standardized that it was dull and uninteresting; that it offered no opportunity for adventure and that no longer were there great deeds to be done.

Today on the contrary we are challenged, as periodically through all history mankind has been challenged, to demonstrate the continued capacity of man to do again what so often he has been called upon to do in the past—to triumph over circumstance and to bring order out of chaos. The nearer perspective and the deeper personal concern with which we view our contemporary difficulties throw those largely out of focus and make them seem more menacing than have been difficulties of those critical periods of the past over the hazards of which man has shown his capacity to triumph. So will man triumph again—let us not doubt that! The great question for the youth of your generation is whether salvation shall come to the world at your hands or through those of some later generation.

• • • •

IF ONE WISH could be granted to me at this time it would be that Isaiah's prophecy of old might be applied to this college and that you men of 1938 might be the agents to make it effective: "They that shall be of Thee shall build the old waste places; thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations; and thou shalt be called the repairer of the breach, the restorer of paths to dwell in."

Such prophecy might be fulfilled by you. Yet its fulfillment would take the type of thinking which has become largely obsolete today but on the basis of which all great accomplishments of the past have been conceived and have been carried through to completion. The fulfillment of such prophecy would require that the present vogue of skepticism and defeatism and mutual antagonisms among men should be abandoned and replaced by faith, by hope and by confidence in one another.

One of America's great captains of industry said last year that the difference between infinite wisdom and finite intelligence was illustrated in the fact that God promised Abraham if ten good men could be found in Sodom and Gomorrah he would save the whole populations of these cities from destruction, but that the people of America had reversed this principle and were holding that if ten bad men could be found in any existing institution of society it ought to be destroyed. Whether or not we accept this specific illustration as pertinent, it is obvious that the prevailing mood among our people is to judge all men, all causes, and all agencies of established society on the basis of their weaknesses rather than on the basis of their potential strengths.

Since perfection is seldom attained and nearly all things in life, even the great and the good, have their defects, weaknesses and flaws are easily discoverable even by untrained minds. Indeed, the motivation for seeking and emphasizing weaknesses of this sort is that their discovery may give a sense of superiority to men themselves incapable of creative and constructive accomplishment. Minds of limited capacity being largely preponderant in any society, there easily becomes prevalent among a people careless unbelief in the existence of genuine goodness, real beauty and good faith. These tendencies of unthinking skepticism are always existent among the incompetent and the ignorant but it is when the competent and the intelligent fall subject to their contagion that hazards become serious.

• • • •

ROMANCE and adventure are never the attributes which attach to a passive attitude toward life. It is in toil and struggle that the satisfactions of life are found. The apostle James, comparing those who simply listened with those who were doers said: "For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass; for he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was."

This is the misfortune in America today, that in what has been our abundance of resources, and in the comforts which have been ours without parallel elsewhere, and in the freedom from effort which has been extended to us as compared with conditions of earlier days, we have slipped into passiveness, and we have lost the zest for battle against degeneration in our individual or collective lives, and we have gone our way forgetting what manner of men we are.

Men of 1938—may such forgetfulness never be yours.

A Catholic View

"Commonweal" Editors Urge "Positive Impartiality" Among Americans Viewing Spanish War; Partisanship Deprecated.

Following are extracts from an article appearing in the current issue of The Commonweal.

MOST DISCUSSIONS of the Spanish question to date in the United States by supporters of both sides has been distinguished more for its heat than for any light cast upon the significance of events. Those directly responsible for the conduct of this magazine have believed that anything they said, however temperate and however qualified as their own opinion, might add rather to the heat than to the light. We have hoped for peace, and the opportunity to comment upon the better problems which peace proposes. But the war continues, and the manner of waging it, both in Spain and here in our own country, seems to change very little with the passage of time. As long as "total" war continues on the Spanish peninsula, it will continue to torment all of us, both in America and in Europe.

We do not for an instant pretend that what is said below is the only proper position for Catholics in the matter; we only affirm our belief, subject to correction, that our position is perfectly compatible with Catholic principles and that it is a view shared by many thousands of American Catholics.

First of all we feel that some distinction must be made between the Spanish problem in Spain and the Spanish problem in the United States. In Spain there is an active civil war which is being fought by both sides in order to achieve, from the point of view of each political group, a better social order. The same struggle to achieve a better social order exists in every country but not in the form of an armed struggle, of a civil war. The general problem exists throughout the world, but the war in Spain relates to Spaniards acting in their immediate struggle and allegiance; outside Spain it relates to non-Spaniards observing a more remote armed struggle and engaged in the general problem in a different way.

Propaganda Confuses Arguments On Both Sides.

WE DO NOT feel qualified to discuss the problem as it is in Spain in any detail because the information available is so generally characterized by propaganda that we do not have any sufficient knowledge of the whole situation. Two reports on a single event emanating from the opposing camps will be in complete contradiction to each other. The official principles of each side must be taken into account, but the actions of each side, when they can be known, speak louder than words.

One government, or part of it, has instigated, or at least permitted, the murder of priests, nuns and lay people; has utilized ruthless methods of accomplishing social and political and economic ends, and chosen, as far as it is possible to see, many objectives in all these fields that should be condemned. Its alliance with Russia implies some, if an unknown degree, of identification with the evils of the Soviet regime.

The second government, which gives the church open support, yet, in its conduct of warfare, repeatedly and despite protests from the Holy Father, destroys defenseless civilians, particularly by its air raids upon cities. Air raids made by one side cannot cancel out those made by the other. Many of its leaders give utterance to totalitarian views of the same sort as have so often been condemned by the church in other countries. The system of government it utilizes and favors, so far as can be seen, contains elements that should be sharply rejected. Its alliance with the Fascist and Nazi nations implicates it to some, if an uncertain, extent in the evils of those regimes. Of course both Spanish governments are in a state of war, which of necessity, under any regime, imposes certain limitations on human freedom. The choice is, to our way of thinking, tragic, however much analogous choices have been necessary in the past and seem almost to be, from time to time, inevitable in man's political life.

Promotion Of Peace Said Duty Of Americans.

WHAT IS the duty of Americans toward Spaniards in their present trouble? There is, of course, the obligation of alleviating distress and suffering on both sides, as much as lies in our power. There is the obligation of doing everything we can for peace. And there is the greatest obligation of all—the universal obligation of prayer for all the human souls involved in the conflict.

But there is a further obligation—that of learning what we can from the crucial struggle in Spain for use in the constant efforts we must make to achieve a better social order in our own country. There are two attitudes we can take in attempting to fulfill this obligation.

We can conceive the struggle for a better social order as inevitably taking in one's own country a pattern similar to that which it has taken in Spain. This usually involves whole-hearted partisanship for one side or the other in the Spanish war. It is the warm and emotional way of looking at the matter; it is the way which has been embraced by most American organs of opinion.

Or else we can try to learn from the Spanish war what to do in order to avoid the things on both sides of that conflict which seem incompatible with the achievement of a better society, and in order to carry on the developments necessary here without precipitating the carnage and hate engendered by war.

Partisanship Decried Among Observers In U. S.

In this country there has been violent partisanship either for the Spanish nationalists or for the Madrid-Barcelona government. We feel that violent American partisanship on either side with regard to the Spanish question is bad, not only because the facts are obscure, but chiefly because both sides include elements that no American wants imported into this country. Neither has begun to enforce or even propound anything comparable to the Bill of Rights, which protects an individual from unbearable use of authority.

It is alleged by his supporters that Franco is not a Fascist, but a restorer of order; by its supporters that Madrid is not opposed to Christianity, but only to "political Catholicism." Since both allegations emanate from partisan sources, they are subject to serious question. But the fact remains that one section of the American public has been convinced that Franco is a Fascist; another section has equally been convinced that the Madrid government is atheist and Communist. In the United States the practical effect of being unreservedly and uncritically pro-nationalist is to seem to one's fellow Americans pro-Fascist; of being pro-government is to seem pro-Communist and anti-religious. The result is to intensify and to make more effectively dangerous both genuine fascism and communism in the United States.

To be strongly partisan concerning the Spanish civil war is indeed to aggravate a current intellectual disease; the conviction that we are going to be forced to choose between fascism and communism. This is a dangerous disease; sufferers from it are blinded by it to the truth that both systems are anti-Christian and secularist.

Totalitarian Ideals Feed Only On Injustice.

WE ARE quite frankly wholehearted partisans of the personalist, Christian states. The seeds of both fascism and communism will germinate only in the soil of injustice, and then must be fertilized by a general public conviction that the leaders of the nontotalitarian state are deficient in moral strength and do not deserve the confidence of their people.

The problem of preserving or creating a form of state in which Christianity can truly flourish is therefore primarily a moral problem and one internal to the country concerned. In each instance both the government and all citizens must dedicate themselves to remedying present injustices, solving present social and economic problems, and, as much as is possible, preventing future injustice. Those entrusted with the governance of the state must strive in every possible way to make themselves worthy of public confidence and trust.

It is for these reasons that we believe that the wisest, as also the most charitable and perhaps the most difficult, policy for Americans is to maintain that "positive impartiality," a sanity of judgment toward both sides in Spain, expressing a preference for specific ideas and actions, when they are certainly known, but being an uncritical partisan of neither. Americans should cease labeling everything they may not like in America or elsewhere as either "Fascist" or "Communist;" they should try, instead, to study American problems not only in the hope of contributing to their reasonable and equitable solution, but also in the belief that such a solution in America will constitute a part of the solution of international and world problems. Above all, we must avoid fostering the growth of totalitarianism and hatred of Christianity by avoiding all activities that even faintly encourage that spirit of hysterical opposition and human distrust which is the very life blood of both of those systems.

Sinews Of War

By Barnet Nover.

Mars Must Still Be Paid.

A GENERATION ago it was fashionable to argue that any large-scale war that might break out in the world would have to be brief if for no other reason than that none but the very richest of nations could stand the financial strain of a prolonged conflict. Thus, when the World War broke out, the most common assumption was that it would be over in a few months. It lasted more than four years.

The pendulum has now swung to the other extreme. It is now assumed that financial difficulties alone need not prevent a nation from waging war indefinitely. Neville Chamberlain expressed this very thought in the House of Commons the other day when, in reply to a demand that Great Britain cut off trade with the Spanish insurgents in retaliation for the bombing of British ships he said: "I have never known of a war stopped for want of financial resources."

BUT THIS is only a half truth. It is a fact that, aside from Bolivia and Paraguay, which fought the Chaco war to the point of mutual exhaustion, there are practically no instances in modern history where a nation at war has laid down its arms simply because it did not have the money to carry on any longer. And there are, on the other hand, many cases where nations have continued to fight despite considerable financial difficulties.

Despite a stringent blockade, for instance, and a host of powerful enemies the Kaiser's Germany fought on for years. Italy surmounted the obstacle of financial and economic sanctions to win the war in Ethiopia. China fights on even though deprived of every penny of customs revenue, the chief sources of governmental income in the past and the loss of Peiping, Tientsin, Shanghai, Hangchow and Nanking.

On the other hand the fact must not be lost to sight that financial stringency, in one form or another, has been a very important contributory factor in determining the end of more than one war. Germany, it is too often forgotten, was during the four years of the World War, in a position to tap the resources of a large and flourishing area extending from the North Sea to the Balkans and on to Bagdad.

In addition, it had the resources of the conquered regions to draw on—Belgium and northern France, Russian Poland, Rumania (after 1916), the Ukraine (after 1918) and so on. And when the war ended in November, 1918, the Reich was still in possession of much of its gains, with its own territory completely uninvaded. Financial stringency and economic exhaustion were important factors behind Germany's collapse.

AN EVEN MORE striking illustration of the same point is to be found in the case of Japan's war with Russia in 1904-05.

Diplomatic relations between the two countries were broken off on February 6, 1904. The Treaty of Portsmouth needing the war was signed on August 19, 1905. Thus the war lasted 18 months in all, although the military phase was of much shorter duration.

Throughout the war Japan was consistently victorious both on land and on sea. Yet, at Portsmouth, the island empire was too weak to impose its will on Russia. The Japanese delegation had to be content with a settlement that contained no provisions regarding an indemnity. Having spent a total of $850,000,000 in waging the war, the Japanese people found that they had to bear the burden alone in contrast to the situation after the Sino-Japanese war of 1894-95 when Japan's war costs were wholly saddled on China.

In other words, had Russia been in a position to continue fighting it might, simply by holding its ground, have ruined Japan. Fortunately for Japan the Russian government, faced by a revolutionary situation within its borders, was anxious for peace.

SINCE LAST YEAR Japan has spent more for war purposes than she spent for all her previous wars combined. This does not necessarily mean that she is on or near the point of financial exhaustion. But should the war last very many months longer such a possibility could by no means be ruled out.

Having had to turn over half its gold reserve to pay for an excess of imports over exports, having progressively used up its reserves of raw materials, Japan may, sooner or later, find it impossible to buy from abroad the essential raw materials which she does not produce within her own borders. When that moment arrives China, provided she can continue her resistance to that point, may find herself in a position of having won the war without having won a single battle.

The fact of the matter seems to be that nations, if desperate, can remain at war for a much longer time than was once deemed possible. But it is very much open to question whether, without ample economic or financial resources or both, any nation can fight on indefinitely.

The totalitarian states have shown that through a drastic regimentation of industry, labor and natural resources they can disregard with impunity—for a time at least—the time-honored rules of governmental finance and classic economics. They give the impression at the present time of making bricks without straw. And it is possible that, barring involvement in a conflict with a nation or combination of nations superior to them in economic and financial resources, they may be able to go on making bricks without straw for a long time to come.

But they realize that there is a limit to their capacities. They realize that a major war may speedily bring their systems to the breaking point.

That is why, on the one hand, they are desperately trying to reach the goal of autarchy—that is of complete self-containment. Only in that way, they believe, can they make themselves independent of foreign supplies for which cash must be paid. And, on the other hand, that is why their foreign policies are necessarily expansionist.

Regarding war not only as inevitable but also as the indispensable means for the attainment of their ends, they are driven to seek possession of territories whose resources, by supplementing their own, would make it possible for them to wage war against any nation without danger of internal collapse.

Frog Shakers, Et Al.

By Roy L. Pepperburg.

Machine Age Nomenclature.

IF YOU WERE ASKED to locate a "frog shaker" or someone requested you to recommend a good "hot-stuff man," or wanted to know where he could find a "snow man" or a "head snooter," you would probably wonder whether he was crazy or you. Yet "frog shakers," "hot-stuff men," "snow men" and "head snooters"—not to mention "tack spitters," "hot-out men" and "gambrelers"—are perfectly normal individuals whose special jobs have taken on peculiar titles in this age of machines and specialization.

Thousands of names like these confront placement people seeking to find openings for their applicants. A "tack spitter" in the upholstery trade might be fitted to do the work of carpet layer in the house furnishing field, but there is no way for a personnel man to know this. Neither is there any source to which he may turn to learn what other jobs might fit the experience of a tack spitter.

To classify, group and define every job in the United States according to the actual work done and the experience needed to do it, is the tough assignment of the Division of Standards and Research of the United States Employment Service.

Without any fanfare, a group of men in the Division of Standards and Research began three years ago to learn exactly what Brown, Smith and Jones are doing today at their work benches in all parts of the country. They wished to know what Brown, a die sinker, does in an auto plant in Detroit; what Smith, a slasher tender, does in a cotton textile mill in Durham, and what Jones, a stripping machine operator, does in a tobacco factory in Tampa. From this information they hoped to be able to tell what else Brown, Smith or Jones would be fitted to do if he lost his present job.

"Frog shaker," "snow man" and "head snooter" are just so much jargon to persons outside the special fields in which the work is done. But the name of a job frequently changes from plant to plant, from one part of the country to another. If the survey is to carry weight it must be inclusive. The Government project offers this coverage.

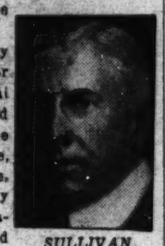
Mayor Hague's Actions In Jersey City Described As Inevitable Consequence To Violence Begun By C. I. O. In Sit-Downs.

By Mark Sullivan.

THE CASE OF Mayor Hague of Jersey City is perhaps the most significant incident of the current news in America. It is significant because it is the second phase of a process through which America is passing. The pattern of the process in America conforms to the pattern of the similar process through which some European countries have passed.



SULLIVAN.

The situation in Jersey City is complicated by other considerations, having to do with Mayor Hague's personality and his record as a political boss. About that nothing is said here. What is said here is confined to the present incident. For the purpose of clear thinking about the true issue, call Mayor Hague "Mayor X." And, if you please, call Jersey City "a city in New Jersey," or a "city in the United States." The basic issue is a national one. It it did not arise in one city it would in another. It is likely to arise in yet other cities and communities.

To understand this situation, it is necessary to go back a way. The sequence of events begins with the first steps taken by the C. I. O. after it was organized. The C. I. O. has a philosophy new in America. The newness of it is measured by the difference between the C. I. O. and the old American Federation of Labor. Mayor Hague does not resist the A. F. of L. On the contrary, the A. F. of L. is with him.

Just what the philosophy of the C. I. O. is I do not undertake to define. To attempt it would be to get involved in hairline refinements of what the radicals call "ideology." Mayor Hague says the philosophy of the C. I. O. is communism. That is not true of all of the C. I. O., perhaps not of most of it. Most persons competent to judge think there is a communistic trend in some of the C. I. O. But just how much communism there is in the C. I. O., to what extent its leaders sincerely try to avoid communism, is hard to determine.

Sit-Down Strike Defined As Violence.

BUT LET US confine ourselves to the actions of the C. I. O. One early action was the "sit-down" strike. The sit-down strike is violence. True, the sit-down is only partial violence, what may be called static violence. But once this static violence is practiced, it can be met in only one of two ways. It can be—and of course ought to be—suppressed by the state, which has the duty of preserving order. Some State governments and local units of government did this. Others did not.

Where government does not suppress or denounce the sit-down strike, citizens and communities are faced by a difficult problem. If they submit to the sit-down strike, they are giving in to violence. If they determine not to submit, they have only one way to resist. That is by informal force, vigilante action. Vigilante action is no more lawful than the sit-down strike.

In some communities in Michigan and in some other States, when the State failed to suppress or denounce the sit-downs, action was taken in some cases by semi-vigilante, semi-official groups of citizens. When sit-down strikers took possession of the chocolate factories at Hershey, Pa., they were ejected by a posse of farmers, wholly vigilante in make-up and leadership.

Hague In Michigan Seen Better Justified.

THIS BRNGS US to Mayor Hague. His case is weaker than it would have been if he were a mayor in Michigan or in some other States. For, as far as we know, the Governor of New Jersey would suppress the violence of the C. I. O. sit-down if and when it occurs. Mayor Hague did not wait for the actual violence to occur. He acted in advance of the violence. Perhaps it might be truthfully said that, from what went on in some other States, Mayor Hague had reason to anticipate violence. Possibly some mayors in Michigan and other States wish they had acted in advance, instead of waiting until after violence had occurred.

It is pertinent to add that the C. I. O. is a Nation-wide organization, directed and mobilized on a Nation-wide basis. When C. I. O. strikes occurred in some communities, thousands of men were brought in to assist from other communities and States. It has been stated that of all the leaders who fomented and led sit-down strikes in Michigan, not one was a citizen of the State. When Mayor Hague used the word "invasion" to describe what he wished to prevent in Jersey City, his use of that word was justified by what had happened elsewhere.

Violence Of Strike Invites More Violence.

ALL THIS illustrates the tragic course through which America is passing, toward one destination or another. The first step is violence, the static violence of the sit-down strike. Inevitably, when this is not suppressed by the Government, it leads to a second step, the use of informal force. The informal force may be a posse, as in Hershey, or an informal and semi-official force led by local officials, as in some Michigan cities. Or it may be, as in Jersey City, a combination of official force and demonstrations by unofficial bodies and groups, led or inspired by an official, and used in advance. The second step was bound to come. It is useless to talk about right or wrong, or about two wrongs not making a right. It is a case of inevitable consequence, once the first step occurs.

Morgan Tells Public Power To Co-operate

Warns Municipalities of Competition From Private Systems.

By the Associated Press.

Hamilton, N. Y., June 22.—Publicly-owned municipal power systems are facing three principal sources of trouble, Arthur E. Morgan, former head of the Tennessee Valley Authority, told the annual conference of municipal electric utilities of New York State tonight.

"The days of easy money and excessive profits in the electric power industry are coming to a close," he said. "Rates are coming down and public municipal systems will have to compete with these lower rates and with narrowed margins of profit.

"In the face of this steady lowering of rates and improvement of service of the private companies . . . continually better management of publicly-owned systems will be necessary to survive competition."

Cites Big Operations.

He cited large-scale operations to bring about standardization and economy in administration as a second ill for publicly-owned plants. He likened private power to the chain-store systems of grocery dispensing.

The third difficulty, he said, is the rapidly growing demand for universal power service in the rural areas.

"No longer is electric power to be one of the peculiar advantages of city living," he pointed out. "It is to be a universal servant for city and farm alike.

May Be Called Obstruction.

"If a publicly-owned municipal system fails to serve or to co-operate with the surrounding rural areas it may be looked upon as an obstruction to progress. If it does serve the surrounding area without giving those areas a voice in management and in policy making, there may be complaint of city domination of rural affairs."

As an idea of what could be done to combat possible inroads of private industry, Morgan advised communities with publicly-owned power systems to work together.

D. C. Heads Bar Truck Parking In Public Space

Regulations Are Adopted Limiting Drivers to Specified Zones.

Operators of vehicles used for hauling merchandise were restricted yesterday from public parking space not specifically designated for them.

Upon recommendation of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, the District Commissioners yesterday approved regulations designed to curb the practice of "for-hire" truck operators from parking in public space.

This action resulted, it was explained, following the increased traffic on Seventh street, south of Constitution avenue, which is the designated public stand for trucks licensed to haul merchandise. The heavy flow of traffic on the street came about when Sixth street was closed in connection with the erection of the Mellon Art Gallery.

Seventh Street Stand Removed.

"The volume of traffic on Seventh street became so great that police and traffic officials requested removal of the stand," James L. Martin, executive secretary to the Public Utilities Commission said.

Thereafter the men who had been accustomed to using this space continued to do so, and it developed that without special regulations on the subject prosecution could not be initiated, Martin said.

The new regulations state that vehicles for hire can occupy only public vehicle stands designated for their use, and cannot occupy the stands for any other purpose. Further, the regulations prohibit "loitering" near the stand should the stand be occupied by the full number authorized.

The only time such vehicles may occupy a public space is during loading and unloading. Operators of the trucks, in addition, must not violate traffic regulations prohibiting parking at their stands between 8 and 9 a. m. and 4 and 6 p. m.

Operators of private automobiles are barred from parking in the public vehicle stands, one regulation states. The final regulation says operators of trucks for hire "shall be at all times within a reasonable distance" of their vehicles when occupying a public vehicle stand.

Johnson Calls Army Officers 'Citizens First'

Assistant Secretary Is War College Graduation Speaker.

Preservation of democracy rests upon the conduct in peace and the example in war of members of the military forces, Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson told the graduating class of the Army War College at commencement exercises yesterday.

"Keep in mind that in a democratic Nation such as ours . . . officers are not of a special class, separate from the rest of the body politic," he advised the 93 officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps to whom he presented diplomas.

"You and those who preceded you here at the Army War College," he continued," have been recruited from the families of farmers, workers and professional men . . .

"You are a member of the military service, but first of all you are a citizen of a great peace-loving country. The ultimate success of your job will depend on the co-operation of peace-loving citizens . . . Do not confuse love of peace with pacifism nor national defense with militarism. Americans hate war but they will not stand for 'peace at any price.'"

Coveting neither foreign territory nor riches, Johnson said, Americans are opposed to large standing armies as tokens of militarism.

He also declared that an Army trained for aggressive purposes would be repugnant to citizens of the United States who recognize, nevertheless, that "in the world today neglect of national defense may lead to national suicide."

Army officers in the graduating class were Col. Henry W. Harms, Lieut. Cols. James R. Alfonte, Gladeon M. Barnes, William E. Brougher, Robert D. Brown, Roger B. Colton, Clarence H. Danielson, Calvin DeWitt, jr., Beverly C. Dunn, Walter K. Dunn, Hubert R. Harmon, Samuel J. Heidner, John H. Hinemon, jr., Dwight F. Johns, Jesse A. Ladd, Thomas B. Lafkin, John E. Lewis, Hamilton E. Officers of the Navy were Capt. Charles H. Morrison; Commanders Hamilton V. Bryan, William S. Hoar and Scott Umsted. Lieut. Cols. Pedro A. del Valle and Thomas E. Watson, of the Marine Corps, also received diplomas.

Howard U. Official Seeks Injunction Against Removal

Emmett J. Scott, secretary of Howard University, yesterday filed suit in United States District Court against Mordecai W. Johnson, president, against an injunction to prevent his removal from office on June 30.

The board of trustees of the university adopted an order last April calling for Scott's retirement or removal at the end of the current fiscal year.

Scott contends he cannot be removed from office except by retirement and that he will not reach 68 until February, 1941. He has been secretary of the university since 1919.

Scott's attempted removal follows another interadministration row at Howard in which former Municipal Judge James A. Cobb contends that he is being illegally removed as a professor of law the end of this month.

Treasury Branch Plan to Speed Tax Dispute Settlement

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

The Treasury Department yesterday revealed plans to establish branches in each of the 38 Federal revenue-collection districts in a move aimed at speeding settlement of tax-collection disputes involving $400,000,000 annually.

The plan is the first major step in President Roosevelt's program for simplification of the tax-collection structure and will be supplemented by the Board of Tax Appeals, which also intends to set up regional offices to expedite appellate hearings.

First offices to be established will be in New York, San Francisco and Chicago. These later will become regional headquarters from which will stem branches in the other 35 collection districts.

The San Francisco office will be under direction of Harold N. Graves, assistant to Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau.

General Motors Denies Charges

South Bend, Ind., June 22 (U.P.)—Lawyers for General Motors today filed a demurrer to an indictment charging the corporation and 19 executives with violating the Sherman antitrust law, seeking to quash the charges on the ground they did not constitute a criminal offense.

The charges, returned last month by a Federal grand jury, accused General Motors, three affiliated finance companies and some executives of coercing automobile dealers in a way that discriminated against against independent finance companies.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Weary of Resisting Worldly Man's Amoral Advances, Yet Fascinated by Him, Girl of 19 Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I came to Washington five years ago to go to school and am now working—but not for the Government, thank goodness. I am 19 years old, considered attractive, and have my share of girl and boy friends. Concerning my boy friends (and I don't wish to sound conceited) I have always had the ones I wanted, have always been the first to break off, and have hurt more than one boy very much. But it seems you get what you give, for now I am being hurt profoundly.

* * * *

One man I know has the power, for some reason, to twist me around his finger. After a few dates he began making serious love to me and soon broke down my resistance. For a long time thereafter I did not hear from him—no word or line. During this time I suffered much. The idea of being jilted by the one man who had ever conquered me was just intolerable. I resolved many things; thought up ways in which to get even. Then he called again.

* * * *

I went with him because I wanted to show him that I would not yield to a moment of weakness again. He gave some poor excuse about financial reasons for not having called me before, but as I knew he had a good job and was the sort who always has dates, I said nothing. We got along fine that night, acting as if nothing had happened. We had another date and he made advances. I fought him off. He was very determined and so was I. He told me he loved me (something he had not said before) and that he wanted me. Frankly, I didn't believe him. He said that it usually made him sick when a girl gave in, and that she had no more appeal for him afterward, but that it was different with me. He said he thought that feeling came only with marriage, and therefore he must be in love with me.

* * * *

After I had convinced him I meant what I said he told me he was glad I hadn't given in. Several times after that I went out with him and each time had to defend my honor. He would use all sorts of persuasions, including both argument and force, but I held my ground, more for the pleasure of not giving in than to protect my moral rights. The last time I saw him I said I was never going to see him again and threatened to leave him on the spot unless he dropped the argument. He did so, finally. Then he began apologizing, wondering what made him do it, saying he was glad I was strong, etc.

* * * *

But such battles are leaving me weak. If it were any other man I would never see him again, but, as I said before, there is something about this man that gets me. He is fairly good looking, nice in other ways, but that is all there is to him. He is popular with women and has had plenty of experience. We are having another date on condition that nothing happens. But what can I do about him? I really want to continue seeing him, but I can't stand these battles. I am convinced that if I did give in he would soon tire of me. Do you think I should keep that date with him? What do you think the chances are that he will stop this dangerous lovemaking? I am looking forward to your answer and hope that you can make me see why I take so much from this man. Sincerely,

F. F. G.

Bright Face of Danger.

Dear F. F. G.: This is one more variation of the fabled case of the moth and the flame, and it should not be necessary to tell you who gets scorched to a cinder, eventually, in that encounter. Vainglorious pride is pitifully inadequate protection against the sort of temptation you are flirting with; it would be far better for you if you were armored with some imperishable moral convictions concerning the value of chastity to women. No woman can hope to cope successfully with a man in such a brutish battle, which has as its only aim the high-handed subjugation of another's ego—no woman, that is, except one who is a callous stranger to the more gracious, generous and sensitive qualities of being; and it is fairly immaterial whether such a woman wins or loses the game, for she is the feminine prototype of your male philanderer. Every fiber of the fine-grained woman's nature would recoil in outrage from any man's continued attempts at moral assault upon her person or her principles, for her instinct would tell her what he is—the immemorial snake in the grass.

* * * *

Now, it is for you to decide whether you are a female rake who has met her match, and are held to the combat by egoistic reasons alone, which, incidentally, are bound to destroy one's hopes of happiness in the end, and with more deadly dispatch than any blows another can deal; or whether you belong, primarily, to the more sensitive category and are merely fascinated by this man in the immemorial fashion of the witless bird with the watchful serpent.

* * * *

The fact that these "battles" leave you "weak" suggest that you do, perhaps, belong in the latter category; and that being the case—or a reasonable supposition, at least—it would certainly follow that your only safety lies in complete retreat from the encounter. Stick around, match your weakly determined flutters of resistence against this erotically experienced man's seasoned technique of seduction, and you can count on heartbreak as a certainty, and complete moral disintegration as a not-too-remote possibility.

* * * *

Whether you are egoist or hypnotized innocent, it is safe to say that the man's greatest attraction for you is the bright glitter of dangerous adventure he represents. If you had him to heel, as an importunate and biddable suitor, I daresay he would strike you as an odious and negligible conquest. In other words, he possesses—you have already admitted it—no substantially lovable qualities as an individual, so far as you are concerned. As a girl of 19, you are floundering in swift emotional currents that are entirely beyond your depth, and they are—just now—whirling you toward the vortex of emotional and moral chaos faster than you know.

* * * *

My advice to you is to strike out for the shores of safety while there is still time; while your soul is still more or less in your keeping; while you can still bring some rational powers of self government to bear upon your conduct; while (to resort to metaphor again) your head is still sufficiently above water to hear the alarm buoys and see not only the rapids ahead but the path that leads away from imminent disaster. In short I advise you NOT to have the projected "date" with this man; and to be curt in the extreme in declining his possible further invitations.

The Bag's the Thing—At the Beach

FOR smartness at the beach, it's the old story—the accessories make the costume. In no season have beach accessories been so spectacular. Bags are so huge they serve as robes or screens and they provide plenty of room for the elaborate beach make-up kits and even a change of cloothing. Wide brimmed hats do duty as umbrellas. Sandals vie with the rainbow and some have solid two-inch clogs to keep out the sand. The gay outfit shown above includes a silk and lastex knit maillot with a hand blocked jungle print on a white ground, a bandanna, a huge crinoline hat with flower applique, and a mammoth shell-shaped white beach bag.

Bony Shoulders Are Unlovely In Strapless Evening Gowns

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE EVENING frocks that obligingly stay up with no straps at all call for curves, for the bare facts are that only the girls with a little meat on their collarbones dare wear this strapless style.

Curves are prettier than angles anyway, but particularly at the shoulderline. We like to see dimples at the base of the throat instead of hollows, and that slope from the crest of the shoulder to the breast should be filled out, not caved in.

What is needed, my bony, bony lasses, is the well-developed chest that goes with superb health and a moderate amount of activity. You may or may not need to put on a little weight to improve your health and contours. But you will certainly want exercise to build up the strong muscle tissue that changes angles into rounded loveliness.

Breast Stroke Urged.

The best all-time exercise for filling out the chest and beautifying the shoulders is the old breast stroke, as used in swimming. The stroke itself may be slightly out of date, but its results as a figure are right up to the minute. Here is a new version of this stroke, one that will improve the figure generally as the shoulder muscles are strengthened:

POSITION: Swing the door half open and stand with the back flat against its edge, the tummy pulled up and shoulders straight.

MOVEMENT: Bring the arms up in front of the body, shoulder level, palms together. Separate the arms in wide, backward circles, lower to sides and circle up again to chest level. Holding the back flat against the door edge will keep the figure in good posture during the exercise.

To increase the circulation and fill out the collarbone hollows, place the right hand on the tip of the left shoulder, and then draw down forcibly across the collarbone. Alternate hands, placing the left hand on the right, and continue briskly until the skin is pink.

The next exercise is somewhat more strenuous.

Position: Stretched face down on floor, with weight supported on the palms of hands and the toes.

MOVEMENT: Slowly lower toward the floor, but only lower as far as you can keep your back straight. When the back begins to sag, relax, rest, and try again. Always keep the back in a straight line, from head to heels.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, June 22.

THE LAST two or three weeks have seen the fancier folk of this crossroads wrirling about like mad, and even as this is written, with the excursion boats leaving daily for dear old Newport, the plush-lined set hasn't been able to settle down into its normal stupor.

ALICE HUGHES

Even I, who sit in a 50-cent gallery seat at the show, am as nervous as 10 witches, and will be glad when the whole crowd clears out and leaves the town to us 7,000,000 who have to scratch and scrabble for a living all summer. First there were the Rockefeller twins, children of Nelson and Mary, and named Mary and Michael in true Good Book style. This was interesting, but not as exciting as a red-hot divorce or a snapshot marriage.

What made the hot spell official was the super-stupendous wedding of our A-1 bachelor, young Al G. Vanderbilt, and his California darling, Manuela Hudson that was. Well, unless you were here at the time, you just don't know. The subways managed to run that day, but there was some talk of closing the stock exchange and calling out the militia. For Al, the horseman, at 25 has $10,000,000, and will have twice that much in a decade, and we have just been waiting for Cupid to spring the trap. Today people are constantly asking, "What does this girl look like who knocked off young Al?" And I keep telling them that she may not be beautiful, but is very pretty in a Spanish way (thanks to her blood), with big hazel eyes, brown hair in a medium bob and an olive skin with a few freckles. Further, I tell them, she has the true look of a lady!

So young Al is married! My, my! Never did a summer start so giddily. Why, I'm afraid the World's Fair in '39 will be a silly old anti-climax!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Of all the graduation ceremonies I've seen here this month a most interesting one was that of the nurses' training school at the marvelous New York Hospital, where my spouse spent most of last summer repenting having tried to push a taxicab off the highway. The great institution stands on the banks of the messy East River, and when the young Florence Nightingales get their caps they move gaily to the river's edge and toss into the stream the black stockings and shoes they wore during their student days. It may not be as ducky as Vassar's daisy chain, or as peppy as Mount Holyoke's hoop-rolling—but it's good enough for me!

* * * *

The usual flood of summer gadgets are piled so high on this desk that I can hardly see my finish. One of the cutest is the new sun tan bracelet, with initials cut through solid silver. A few days on the hot sands, and the monogram is on the wrist—as long as the tan lasts. The armlet was designed by a very clever girl named Leonore Doskow, who is doing some wondrous things with silver these days. Of course, when the tan wears off you're anonymous again!

The GENTLER SEX

Success Story.

(An Interview)

"Miss Bibble, as one of the Nation's outstanding business women, would you mind giving other women some tips on how to succeed?"

"Not at all. This is a wonderful age we live in. Women are wonderful. They are doing things—big things——"

"Just a minute Miss Bibble. To what do you attribute your own phenomenal success."

"Hard work, of course, and then I have always retained my femininity. If there is anything men in business offices abhor, it is a woman who is strong-minded and masculine."

"Do you think men give women a fair chance in business, Miss Bibble?"

"Absolutely. The woman of today can go anywhere, do anything, scale any height——"

"Pardon, Miss Bibble, but what are some of your specific secrets of success?"

"Well dependability, of course, and then I have always kept myself immaculately groomed. I have always kept my hair looking as if it was freshly washed, my nails newly manicured—though with not too vivid a polish as men are most particular about that—and then in summer I always wear white as I find men——"

"But, Miss Bibble, would you mind telling what are some of the mental qualities a business woman needs?"

"Well of course she should be energetic, conscientious, co-operative and I have found in my own experience that a little perfume helps. Not too strong, mind you, for men in offices are very sensitive about such things."

"Should the modern business woman have a sense of humor, Miss Bibble?"

"Undoubtedly. Next to my femininity, nothing has helped me so much in my career as a sense of humor."

"In what way, Miss Bibble?"

"Well my employers have all been exceptionally witty men—regular screams. They have all said the funniest things! I have nearly laughed my head off at some of the things they have said."

"However, you do feel that the modern business woman should take her job seriously, Miss Bibble?"

"Yes, indeed. She should be loyal and earnest, and of course always happy and smiling. I have found that men in offices like for you to look on your work as play . . . What I mean is they like for you to look as if you were having loads of fun doing it.

"What about tact, Miss Bibble? Doesn't the modern business woman need tact in dealing with her women associates?"

"Yes indeed; men in most offices must be handled with gloves. I have always made it my policy never to interrupt, never to contradict, never to explain——"

"But if you happen to have an idea, Miss Bibble?"

"Oh, but the really successful woman in an office never has an idea."

"I suppose, of course, you have worked long hours in making your climb in the world, Miss Bibble?"

"I have always worked the right hours. I have made it a point to be at the office at the time my boss has been there. Also I have dropped in frequently on holidays and on Sundays to get things in my desk and to show I was interested."

"I suppose you feel women should have the impersonal approach in business, Miss iBbble?"

"Yes, indeed. I have always been strictly impersonal. When men have bawled me out, yelled at me, sworn at me, even hurled paste pots at me, I have been unfailingly smiling. Nothing irks a man in an office so much as to see women take things personally."

"Do you mean to say, Miss Bibble, that men have done such things to you?"

"Well that was when I was quite inexperienced. For the last 15 years men have been perfectly darling to me."

"Then you think any woman can succeed in business?"

"Yes, indeed. This is a wonderful age we live in. I say emphatically that any woman who has perseverance, diligence, dependability, character, courage—oh, I'm sorry! I'm ALWAYS dropping that lipstick."

Sara Dodge's Paintings To Go on View in Capital

Daughter of William de Leftwich Dodge to Show 12 Canvases at Georgetown Galleries From Monday Through July 18.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Mixing a career with social circling . . . and making both jell is quite a trick. But Sara Pryor Dodge (Mrs. Hunter Kimbrough) has managed it to a fine turn . . . with rather more emphasis on art than on parties in the past few years. Proof of her painting activity will be on display at the Georgetown Galleries from Monday through July 18, when 12 of her canvases will be included in an exhibition.

Miss Dodge has had other shows in Washington, but none in which there were so many portraits . . . and she had rather do a portrait than a landscape any time. As a rule she finds male models easier to please, but she likes to paint women as well as men, and several portraits of women will be in the show.

The daughter of the widely known artist, William de Leftwich Dodge, she first studied with her famous father. Later she attended the Grand Central Art School in New York, where she was a pupil of Wayman Adams. She was well launched on her career when she married; and since then, she has found time to continue her painting. Perhaps the secret of her success in managing a home with one hand and a career with the other lies in her belief that "A balance must be maintained between the two. I paint when I can find the time," she went on. "But when I'm too busy with other things, I don't worry about my art."

Although she was born in New York, Miss Dodge feels she belongs to Washington and Virginia because most of her forebears were from this part of the country. Her grandfather was Gen. Roger A. Pryor, noted Confederate soldier of Virginia and later United States Minister to Greece.

Both before and since her marriage Miss Dodge has traveled widely. She has lived in Italy and has spent much time in France, England and Mexico. Some of the landscapes in the forthcoming exhibition were painted abroad. All the portraits, however, were done in this country. Two of the most recent —the one of Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Busby, daughter-in-law of the former Representative Busby, of Mississippi, and that of Mrs. J. Lee Murphy—are just now being completed.

One of Miss Dodge's favorite portraits is of a young girl she saw several years ago on a street in Stonybrook, Conn. A portrait of Senator Pat Harrison completed three years ago when Miss Dodge was visiting in Mississippi is another that has won wide attention.

A preview of the exhibition is scheduled for Monday evening from 8 to 10 o'clock. The following day it will be open to the public. Theodore Kane, wife of Maj. Norman Kane, and Miss Gladys Kerr are in charge of the Georgetown Galleries, 1324 Wisconsin avenue, where the show is to be held.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE SWEDISH Legation is a center of activity as members of the staff are preparing for the visit 10 days hence of their Crown Prince and Princess.

DUDLEY HARMON

Telephones ring frequently as the correct way to address a Crown Prince is requested; Gov. George Earle's proclamation, establishing a State holiday in Pennsylvania to celebrate the three hundreth anniversary of the first Swedish-Finnish settlement on the Delaware, has been framed and hung on the wall; social lists are checked and hotel accommodations lined up for the 60-odd persons in the Crown Prince's entourage.

THE MINISTER of Sweden—ruddy-faced Wollmar Bostrom—will start the social schedule with a luncheon at the legation in honor of the couple July 3, the day of their arrival. They will spend the morning attending services at the Swedish chapel and meeting members of the Swedish colony.

After luncheon, the Minister and Mme. Bostrom will give a reception in honor of the couple.

The Crown Prince and his wife expect to have July 4 free for sightseeing. They will leave the following day for visits to New York, Boston, Chicago and Minneapolis, sailing the last week in July to return to Sweden.

• • • •

THE CROWN PRINCE has made a name for himself as an archaeologist. His wife (she is his second) is of English birth, her father having been Prince Louis von Battenberg, first Lord of the Admiralty, who after the war changed his name to Mountbatten. She is a granddaughter of Queen Victoria. Tall, distinguished, the Princess likes riding and golf. Both she and her husband are very fond of social life. Their marriage took place in 1923 at St. James's Palace.

The royal couple will stay at the Georgetown estate of Robert Woods Bliss, former envoy to Sweden, and Mrs. Bliss. With them will be Miss Brita Steuch, the Crown Princess' lady-in-waiting. Prince Bertil, the Crown Prince's son, will put up at the legation, as will several other members of the suite.

• • • •

THE CROWN PRINCE and his wife will come to Washington from Hyde Park, where they will spend the first two days of next month with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. They land next month in Wilmington on the Kungsholm, and will stay in the Delaware city with Harry duPont. From there they will go to Philadelphia to visit the Governor and Mrs. Earle.

On July 9, 10 and 11 they will be the guests in Newport of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Manville aboard the yacht Hi-Esmaro. A Manville daughter married the Swedish Prince Bernadotte. Mrs. Hamilton McK. Twombly and Gen. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt will help entertain the couple aboard the yacht.

• • • •

AND, oh yes—if you are one of the fortunates invited to meet the royal visitors, you will address them as "Your Royal Highness." And remember—introduce others to them, but never show your ignorance by introducing royalty to anyone, as the theory is that everybody should know a prince when he sees one.

Francis Garners On Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Joseph Garner, who were married June 18, are now on a trip through the Northern States. After July 15 they will be at home at 1511 Rhode Island avenue.

Mrs. Francis Damann, the bride's sister, was matron of honor. She wore peach colored net with aqua accessories and carried a large bouquet of talisman roses.

Robert J. Garner was his brother's best man and the ushers were John Bauman and Herbert Garner, another brother.

A reception at the home of bride's mother followed the ceremony.

Mrs. Garner attended McKinley High School and her husband is an alumnus of St. John's College and Columbus University, School of Accountancy.

Mrs. E. K. Gasch Presides At Soroptimist Luncheon

Party Honoring International Heads of Club Also Has Miss Mary Bourke, of D. C. Club, as Chairman, Mrs. Newman at Guest Table.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, past president of the Washington Soroptimist Club and newly-elected national second vice president, presided yesterday at a luncheon given at the Traymore Hotel in Atlantic City by clubs of the South Atlantic region. Guests of honor were women from abroad, attending sessions of the International Federation of Soroptimist Clubs, which followed the conclave of the American Federation, held last week.

Clubs in the hostess group included Washington, Alexandria, Arlington, Baltimore and Montgomery County. The luncheon speaker was Miss Agnes Cronin, of Washington, who is associated in an advisory capacity with the WPA. She discussed advancement of women in industry and the professions, and outlined various projects for unemployed women which have been inaugurated under that agency.

Distinguished guests at the head table with Mrs. Gasch included Dr. Suzanne Noel, of Paris, founder of the European Federation of Soroptimist Clubs; Elizabeth Hawes, president of the British Federation; Clara Meijers, now president of the European Federation; Constance Bley, its secretary; Dorothy Johnson, secretary of the British Federation; Mrs. Anna Sprott, of Vancouver, newly-elected president of the American Federation, and Miss Alice Steele, immediate past president of the American group.

Among those at the guest table were Mrs. Mary Agnes Newman, president of the Washington club; Miss Edith Reinhart, regional director; Mayme Matthey, newly-elected first vice president of the American Federation; Mme. Marcella Kroemar-Bach, of Paris, and Miss Mary Bourke, of the Washington club, chairman of the international luncheon.

Other Washington club members attended the international convention, at which about 150 delegates were present, representing clubs in England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Holland, Austria and China. They included Miss Daisy Reed, immediate past president; Mrs. Mary Catherine Lewis, Miss Estelle Zirkin, Mrs. Lorraine Good, Miss Emma A. Buechele, Mrs. Nell Hyson, Miss Nora Hoffman, Mrs. Katherine Morris, Miss Polly Pollard, Miss Jene Bearmore and Miss Mary Judge.

Kay Ryan was editor of the Daily Bulletin, which was issued during the convention with news of its programs and of interesting personalities among the delegates. It had a wide circulation among the members. Monday's issue included a rhyme written by Mrs. Gasch, giving the definition of the word "soroptimist," letter by letter.

An item in the Tuesday Bulletin announced that Mae C. Bowman, past president of the Alexandria (Va.) club, had spent Father's Day with her father in Connecticut.

The Washington club will entertain 70 of the international convention delegates here tomorrow. Their stop in Washington will be one of the high points in a tour of America which foreign visitors are making. They will be met at the Union Station by local club members and taken for a drive over the city. From 5 to 7 o'clock they will be entertained at a tea at the Women's City Club, where some of the members of that organization will join with the Soroptimists in welcoming them.

4-H Club Instructors Are Guests at Luncheon

Underwood & Underwood.

OLA POWELL MALCOLM, senior home economist of the Department of Agriculture, who directed the courses in home industry given during the 4-H Club Encampment, entertained a group of the instructors and several officials of the department yesterday at a luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel. Left to right are C. W. Warburton, director of extension work for the Department of Agriculture; Mrs. Harry L. Brown and Mr. Brown, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, and Mrs. Malcolm.

Mrs. Ola Malcolm Gives Luncheon

Mrs. Ola Powell Malcolm, senior home economist of the Department of Agriculture, in charge of home demonstration work for the Southern States, entertained at luncheon in the Louis Seize room at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday in honor of instructors in home industry at the national 4-H Club camp. It was the last day of the encampment, which has brought 4-H Club boys and girls to Washington from all sections of the country.

Mrs. Malcolm was in charge of home industry instruction, including pottery-making, harness-making, wood carving, weaving and glove-making, all introduced at the 4-H Club camp this year for the first time.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

THE ZONTA CLUB, after its luncheon yesterday, saw its president, Miss Emma T. Hahm, off to the annual convention of Zonta International, which opens next Thursday at Banff, Canada. She attended the luncheon and, at its close, rolled up the banner of the Washington Club and stated on her motor journey north, accompanied by Mrs. John Stewart.

Before leaving Emma T." admonished the members to brush up on their singing during her absence. Elizabeth Haney will act as song leader and Emily Dickinson will accompany at the piano. The responsibility for spurring the club in its musical endeavors will rest with Elizabeth Cox, vice president, who will be in charge of the weekly luncheon meetings during Miss Hahm's absence.

• • • •

WITH NO REFLECTION on Zonta, or the other business women's clubs of the District, it's safe to say the Soroptimists take the prize when it comes to making music. Just a suggestion of the name of the song and away they go—everybody knows all the words and everybody sings.

"And no wonder," say the girls in the other clubs, "They have Marjorie Webster." . . . . . .

Now, with Zonta setting its mind to singing, the Soroptimists may have to look to their la-la-laurels.

OFFICERS of Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, received with as much pride as a grandmother the announcement of the birth of a son at Sibley Hospital Tuesday to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Erikson.

Mrs. Erikson is a member of the chapter and a graduate of Mooseheart, national home and school maintained by the Moose Fraternity. Mr. Erikson is also a Mooseheart graduate of the same class, 1933, and their marriage last year was the culmination of a schoolday romance. She came to Washington to make her home immediately after graduation and has been employed in the office at the United States Navy Yard. He came here from Goshen, Ind., where he had made his home until about 18 months ago, and their marriage took place last summer.

SORORITIES seem to be concentrating on conventions in Washington this week-end. Beta Mu, which usually holds a meeting only every other year, is having an extra one this summer because so many of its members from out-of-town college chapters received trips to Washington for graduation presents. With everybody coming to town, there was nothing to do but have a convention.

It will open at the Wardman Park Hotel tomorrow and continue through Saturday. A banquet and dance are scheduled for Saturday night.

Eleanor Gardner, national president, is chairman of the convention committee, assisted by Anne Caton, national recording secretary; Elizabeth Murr, national corresponding secretary, and Martha Stoner, national historian.

The sorority was founded in Washington October 17, 1917, and incorporated February 14, 1934.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Fiddler in the Grass.

The humblest person oft can do
That quite impossible for you.
—Old Mother Nature.

Peter Rabbit was just about to poke his wobbly little nose into the business of someone else. Of course this was nothing new for Peter. He has a way of doing this. He just can't help it. Anyway, that is what he says. It is curiosity. It is just curiosity that prompts him to do this, although he insists that it is thirst for knowledge.

All his life Peter had been acquainted with crickets. Of course. They were neighbors of his every summer. Yet until now he never had given them so much as a passing thought. Most of us are more or less like Peter. We have neighbors of whom we know nothing, and we do not try to know them or about them. Until now there had been nothing about a little black cricket to interest Peter Rabbit. Now all this was changed. It was changed because Chewink the Towhee had declared that crickets do not sing when Peter knew that they did sing. At least he thought he knew it. Now for the first time he really doubted. It might be that after all Chewink was right. You see he had just watched a cricket "sing" while at the same time he was engaged in washing one of his antennae, and he just couldn't sing with a mouthful of antennae. Nobody could.

The little black cricket stopped what he was doing and started to creep under a flat stone. "Don't go," cried Peter. "You know me. You know I won't hurt you. I want to talk to you. Do you sing?"

The little black cricket backed out from beneath the flat stone. "So it is you, is it?" said he. "Yes, I know you and I don't know that you won't hurt me. I know you won't do it intentionally, but you're careless. You don't always look where you are stepping, and I don't want to be stepped on. I'll feel safer under that stone. Did you say something about singing?"

"I asked if you sing," replied Peter.

"People say I chirp," responded the cricket.

"Well, chirping is one kind of singing, I guess, so you do sing," said Peter.

"I didn't say so," declared the cricket. "As a matter of fact, I don't sing. I haven't a singing voice."

"But you do chirp," said Peter.

"But I don't chirp," was the prompt response.

"You just said you do," declared Peter somewhat crossly.

"Of what good are those long ears of yours?" demanded the cricket, and added: "I said that people say I chirp, but that doesn't make it so. I don't chirp. I can't chirp. I never chirped a single note in my life. I don't expect to, ever. People can't do things if they haven't the necessary things to do them with. So how can I chirp or sing without a voice to chirp and sing with? Tell me that, Peter Rabbit."

"Don't go," cried Peter. "You know me."

"But you make a noise," protested Peter. "You make a noise that can be heard a long distance."

"Noise!" exclaimed the cricket indignantly. "Did you say noise? You did. I distinctly heard you You Did. I distinctly heard you say that I make a noise. But what can I expect from a fellow who doesn't know the difference between noise and music? It is evident that my music is wasted on you."

"I'm sorry," said Peter. "Of course it is music. Anything that a lot of people love to listen to must be music, and a lot of people love to listen when you are—what are you doing when you are doing it if you are not singing?"

"Playing," replied the cricket.

"Playing what?" asked Peter looking perplexed.

"My fiddle, of course," replied the cricket.

"Then you do have a fiddle," said Peter.

"Of course I have a fiddle. Has anybody said that I haven't a fiddle?" retorted the cricket.

"No. No, of course not," replied Peter. "Will you play your fiddle for me?"

"I would love to," replied the cricket, and straightway began.

Fine Feathers for the Duchess

English women, like their sisters throughout the world, would rather look at a pretty hat than watch a horse race, so the center of attention at the Ascot track recently was the Duchess of Kent and her headgear. The attractive wife of the king's youngest brother is shown wearing a plumed model when she arrived by carriage at the track.

Social Security to Draft Simpler Benefit Rules

By the Associated Press.

The Social Security Board is going to bring its regulations down to the simplicity of "A. B. C.'s." From its experience in administering unemployment insurance in past months the board yesterday declared a primary aim would be:

"Development of methods for calculating and paying benefits which will be more easily understood by workers and employers and will result in more prompt payment of benefits."

Sexton Wins $3,000 Suit Over Collision on River

In one of the rare admiralty cases that come before the United States District Court, Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat yesterday held that the Magdalena, owned by George W. Boyd, was to blame in a Potomac River collision in September, 1934, with the Maybenot, owned by Dr. Lyman Sexton. The Magdalena, which sank, was said to have crossed the bow of the Maybenot. Boyd asked $3,000 damages.

taste Schlitz today!

Truly a great beer—the result of almost a century of devotion to an ideal in brewing.

Smooth . . . pale . . . pleasingly dry . . . it is brewed perfectly to the modern taste—with all the world-famous SCHLITZ character and flavor. One bottle or can tells the story. You'll enjoy Schlitz today more than any beer you ever drank

People who know drink SCHLITZ

THE BEER THAT MADE MILWAUKEE FAMOUS!

HORSESHOES CAN'T—BUT SCIENCE CAN

When we tell you that every bottle, every can, every drop of SCHLITZ is exactly the same, we mean just that. And here's why SCHLITZ can make this statement. At the mammoth SCHLITZ brewery, the enzyme action that changes choice grain and hops to fine SCHLITZ beer is never left to luck. SCHLITZ has spent millions of dollars and years of research in developing Precise Enzyme Control.

Under this method, SCHLITZ is brewed to the exact point where it is at its very best . . . the point where it is neither underripe nor overripe. It is just right. And that's the way it comes to you.

Every bottle and can contains Sunshine Vitamin D—exclusive with SCHLITZ.

AROUND THE WORLD WENT THE STORY IN 1849

In 1849, the chief topic of conversation was Sutter's gold discovery in California. But even this did not dim the news of another discovery that very same year . . . the discovery of a new and better beer being brewed in Milwaukee.

Through the years that followed, one man told another until the whole world heard. And the beer brewed by SCHLITZ became The Beer that Made Milwaukee Famous.

From the very beginning, the character and flavor of SCHLITZ have set it apart from all other beers. These same unmatched qualities are yours to the fullest in delightfully dry, delightfully drinkable SCHLITZ today.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Mr. Berle . . . best in tub.

A Washington wit who had heard that Mrs. Joe Kennedy has mothered nine children, and who consequently pictured her as a motherly, middleaged soul, encountered her for the first time.

He gazed upon the youthful, enchanting lady in amazement. "Whew!" he said. "You make me believe in the stork."

• • • •

CAMPAIGN CAPERS: Already the fine Baltimorean hand of Frank Waltman, G. O. P. publicity chief, is evident—in the Congressman Tinkham (N. Y.) blast against Cordell Hull; in Representative Snell's scolding of the Democrats for unseating a Republican member from New Hampshire; in the McNary-Snell accusation that the adjournment of Congress was premature.

• • • •

The effect is symphonic, mingling the clangor of hand grenades exploding against a tin roof with the rat-tat-tat of machine-gun fire against the Democratic brass hats . . .

But you'll notice one thing: There is no heavy-artillery bombardment of Franklin Delano Roosevelt . . . He will be sprinkled with dehydrated, withered rose petals. He's still too popular to serve as a target.

"—the tale of the twin tubs."

Mr. Waltman has begun to issue a weekly column called "Looking Forward," which looks like a first cousin to Charlie Michelson's "Dispelling the Fog," because it's printed so similarly . . . Also, like Charlie's, it's issued for Sunday release, for the light summer weekend reading . . . Better watch it; this should be the ink-slinging battle of the century.

• • • •

I'd swear that the allusion to Twin-Tub Adolf Berle, in a radio speech by Representative Dudley White, of Ohio, was sprinkled in by the pungent Mr. Waltman . . . Since the story about Assistant Secretary of State Berle's twin tubs broke about the same time as Bob Burns' story about his wife's uncle's twin tubs, I'd better clarify them, to avoid any confusion in the campaign.

• • • •

Bob Burns' uncle-in-law mounts his twin tubs one above the other, with the upper one inverted; when anyone approaches he lowers it, because he imagines he's an oyster . . .

But the Berle twin tubs are arranged side by side, because the prodigious Assistant Secretary of State is at his wittiest when in the tub, and his wife doesn't want to miss any of his gems.

Now you have it straight, and can vote accordingly.

"—more glamorous than Moscow."

In the last-minute excitement the Pittman resolution against baby bombing was almost lost in the shuffle, and attracted little attention . . . Actually, it phrased only mildly the feeling of Congress and Washington on this subject . . .

• • • •

One day Senator King, of Utah, advocated recalling our Ambassador from Berlin; the next day he toyed with the idea of severing diplomatic relations with Tokyo . . .

So indignant were the lawmakers against the butchers who bomb babies that if Senator King had embodied his meditations in a resolution he might have won a two-thirds vote for it.

• • • •

The white tables have blossomed like frosted mushrooms on the Shoreham's terrace, the center of the Capital's night life in the subtropical summer . . .

Diplomats who have been stationed in many capitals say the only sight to compare with it for glamour is the great fountain room of the Hotel Metropole in Moscow; and I prefer the terrace, because it's better ventilated . . .

Here you may see the statesmen cavorting on the dance floor, resting from the pursuit of the more abundant life . . . When you come to Washington (or when your country cousins come here) better miss a couple of meals and come here for the boned chicken and a dance, at the modest sum which most tourists usually spend for a whole day's food ad drink.

Group Health Action Is Left Up to Justice

Bailey Takes Suit Under Advisement After Lawyers Argue.

Justice Jennings Bailey yesterday took under advisement the question of whether the Group Health Association is practicing medicine or selling insurance illegally after listening all day to a battery of lawyers.

Whatever the court's ruling, the case is expected to be appealed because of the social significance of the question. Justice Bailey did not indicate when he would reach a decision.

The case found the United States Attorney's office, the corporation counsel's office, and the District Medical Society aligned on one side against counsel for G. H. A. and the District Chapter of the National Lawyers Guild.

Legas vs. Social.

Government attorneys confined their arguments to the legal issues, whether G. H. A. is practicing medicine as a corporation in violation of the healing art practices act and whether it is engaged in the insurance business and therefore should be subject to regulation by the District superintendent of insurance.

G. H. A. attorneys emphasized the sociological issues and said a majority of the population of the United States was unable to pay for adequate medical services.

"The Group Health Association is not state or socialized medicine as charged," said E. K. Neuman, of the GHA counsel. "It is a step away from socialized medicine.

"Unless people are permitted to band together and obtain such services, the Federal Government will be compelled to foster compulsory health insurance."

Cites Gallup Poll.

Neuman cited a recent Gallup poll in The Washington Post as evidence of the public support of movements to provide medical care to persons unable to pay prevailing charges.

Howard Boyd, assistant United States attorney, and Vernon E. West, principal assistant corporation counsel, contends that GHA is violating the healing art practices act and the District insurance law.

They and counsel for the District Medical Society asked the court to dismiss a suit for declaratory judgment filed by GHA to clarify its legal status.

Boyd contended that the GHA as a corporation actually was engaged in practice of medicine and that if the same idea were applied to law an organization might sell legal services to the public and "hold a fire sale in divorces" without supervision of the courts.

Hines Appeals For Jobs for U. S. Veterans

America's war veterans prefer jobs to pensions, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, told the annual encampment of the Columbia Department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, at the John Burroughs School last night.

"Private industry and Government departments must do all they can to give preference to former service men," Gen. Hines said. He cited the Veterans Bureau as having a predominant number of former soldiers on its rolls.

The best way to keep America out of war is to keep America so well prepared no other nations will attack her, Hines declared.

Invocation was pronounced by the Rev. Howard E. Snyder, department chaplain. Speakers included R. W. Perry, president of the Brookland-Woodridge Business Men's Association; David B. Herman, commander of the District department; Millard W. Rice, national legislative officer; Mrs. Adelaide M. Grant, president of the ladies' auxiliary; John W. Wimer, chief of staff of the District department, and Walter Welsh, aide to the commander of the District National Guard.

Ten-year-old Ramona Wiegand recited "The Constitution Speaks," and 5-year-old John Darling recited the Pledge of Allegiance.

Madison, Wis., June 22 (U.P.).—Gov. Philip F. La Follette indicated earlier this year, when he announced plans for national organization of progressives, that he would leave public office at the expiration of his term to devote full time to the organizational activities.

Wilson's Son-in-Law Sees Progress in Peace Since 1918, Despite War Clouds Over World

More progress has been made toward world peace in the past 20 years "than during the preceding four centuries," Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, declared last night at commencement exercises of Wilson Teachers College in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School.

Seventy-one seniors were awarded diplomas by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education.

"In spite of the war clouds which hover, threatening and low, over our world today, in spite of superficial appearances, I believe we are undeniably further along the road to peace" than in 1918, Sayre asserted.

Expressing the "profound conviction that world peace is something that can be won," Sayre declared it cannot be achieved overnight by "mere treaties or legal documents," by war or by "mere emotional appeal." Sayre is a son-in-law of President Wilson.

Awards were presented as follows: Newtonian Society, to Monroe Goldberg; music awards, Cameron Marsh and Sidney Zevin; Glee Club key, Claude Millis; orchestra key, Olan Turner; band key, Benjamin Levenson; French award, Doris Burr.

Royal Swedes To Attend D. C. Church Service

Crown Prince and Party to Be Welcomed at Augustana Lutheran.

Crown Prince Gustaf Adolph of Sweden, Crown Princess Louise, and their son, Prince Bertil, will attend services at the Augustana Lutheran Church when they arrive here for a three-day visit July 3, it was announced last night by the Rev. Arthur O. Hjelm, pastor.

The royal delegation is coming to Washington after spending two days at Hyde Park as the guest of President Roosevelt, who will join with members of his Cabinet and other dignitaries in welcoming the Swedish group at the tercentenary celebration in Wilmington, Del., June 27. More than 100 leaders in civic, economic, religious and political life of Sweden will attend the exercises.

Scores of Washingtonians, especially Swedish-Americans, are planning to be present at the Wilmington event, when a monument will be unveiled on the site of the Swedish "Plymouth Rock." President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull will be among the speakers. The occasion will mark the 300th anniversary of the establishment of the first Swedish colony in America.

Suicide 'Hero' Rewarded by Bruised Shins

Charles Raucher, 21-year-old student at Rollins College, of 3133 Connecticut avenue, yesterday tried to prevent what looked like a suicide attempt.

wards were a tear in his trousers, bruised shins, and a cigarette.

Driving across Taft Bridge, Raucher saw a well-dressed young woman climbing over the railing. He stopped his car, and tripped over the gear shift lever tearing his pants and bruising his shins.

A second car slammed on its brakes, and another man ran with Raucher toward the woman.

As they approached her, the girl reached over the railing and retrieved a scarf that was wound around a support. She offered them a cigarette to quiet their nerves and gave her name only as "Betty."

80,000 See Louis Kayo Schmeling in First Round

Sports | The Washington Post | Sports

18 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1938 X*

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

New York, June 22.—Two years ago under the yellow lights of the Yankee Stadium, Max Schmeling hit Joe Louis with a right hand punch to the chin that sent him sprawling in the resin.

Last night under the same yellow lights of Yankee Stadium, the same Schmeling hit Louis with another right to the chin. But when the right landed it carried no authority, for the German already was battered and beaten, groggy and limber-legged, though the fight was less than 30 seconds old.

VIDMER.

That was the one punch that Schmeling landed. The Brown Bomber, risen in the two intervening years to the royal rank of world's heavyweight champion, swarmed all over him from the opening bell of the opening round. He whipped a left hook to the German's chin, sent him reeling against the ropes and rained right and lefts on his helpless head and body until his knees began to sag.

Three times the Brown Bomber hammered Schmeling to the canvas and only twice could he stagger to his feet, more dazed and desperate than Louis was two summers ago. The third time Schmeling went down he struggled frantically to regain his feet. He lifted himself to his knees, but he could not get any farther and keeled over again.

But even if he had been successful, it wouldn't have prolonged the fight, for Arthur Donovan, the referee, already had waved his hand to signal that the slaughter was over and a towel, in token of surrender, had been hurled into the ring from Schmeling's corner.

And so the answer was given to the questions that the fight fans have been asking each other and arguing about for two years. Schmeling did it once, but it couldn't happen again. Not to Joe Louis; not to the greatest heavyweight that has come along in a decade, maybe two, maybe the greatest in the history of the ring. That other time, the one defeat on Joe Louis' rich record, just a mistake, it couldn't happen again.

"Danger—Louis Working."

This time Louis didn't fiddle around at the beginning, waiting for a clear opening for one good shot. This time Schmeling did not get the chance to surprise the Dark Destroyer with a sudden, swift right that sent him stumbling down the street of dreams for the rest of the night, finally to fall flat after 12 rounds of aimless rambling.

This time Louis went right to work, which I may be so bold to add, I suggested vaguely that he might. He waded in from the start and he finished his job in a hurry—2 minutes and 4 seconds, according to the timekeeper's official watch, but 10 seconds to all intents and purposes.

Did I say "four or fewer?" Did some of you nice people suggest that I was out of my head? In view of what happened, I only wonder how I could have been so conservative. And I am more convinced than ever that it is practically impossible to outsmart a keg of dynamite.

And there was dynamite in the ring with Schmeling last night. There was a dark-hued, determined young man with a tremendous desire to batter the brains out of the man before him. Perhaps he did not remember what happened to him at the hands of this same man two years ago.

Power of a Purpose.

Maybe he loafed a little against Bob Pastor, unwilling to chase the fleeing phantom who found retreat the better part of valor. Maybe he was a little wary of being butted by Tommy Farr. And these two achieved the distinction if not the honor of facing the Brown Bomber and remaining on their feet. But he was not loafing or overcautious against Schmeling. Joe had but one purpose—to wipe out the sting of his one defeat.

And he gave them the answer to the question everyone had been asking. And in no uncertain terms! Is Joe Louis really the champion of the world, or should Schmeling hold the title? There can be no more doubt on that score after what happened at the Yankee Stadium, with 80,000 witnesses viewing the undeniable evidence.

Louis proved his right to the throne and refuted a million arguments in a thoroughly decisive manner. Some said that Schmeling simply was a greater fighter. Some pointed out that Louis never had beaten a first-class fighting man. Some steadfastly maintained that the German was too smart for him. Others argued that once a colored man is beaten he never can come back to conquer his master.

And some even said that Louis, remembering the beating he took two years ago, would be afraid.

Afraid? He was a sneering, snarling jungle cat with fangs hungry for blood. Afraid? He came in with a snarl on his lips and the light of battle in his eyes and battered Max Schmeling's body purple and pink in a few short seconds.

Louis was living dynamite that allows no rebuttal.

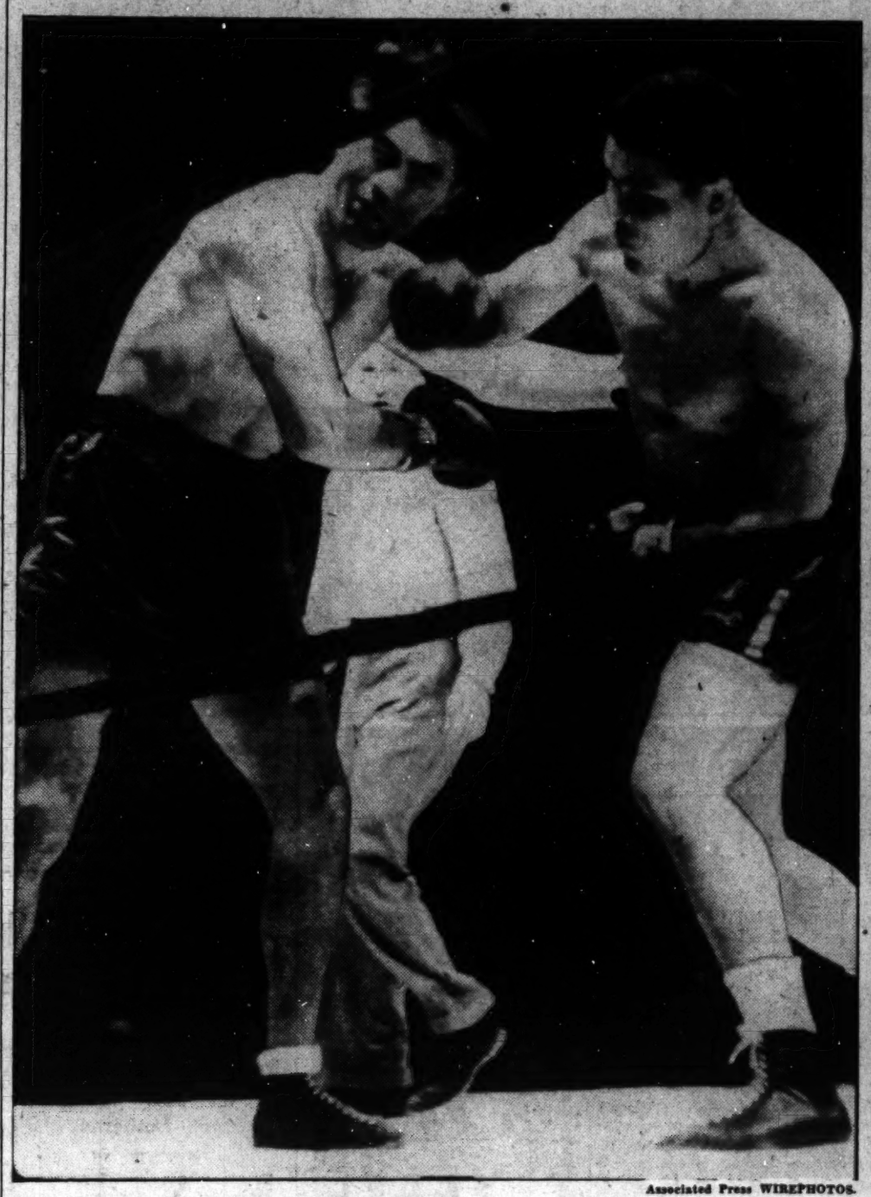
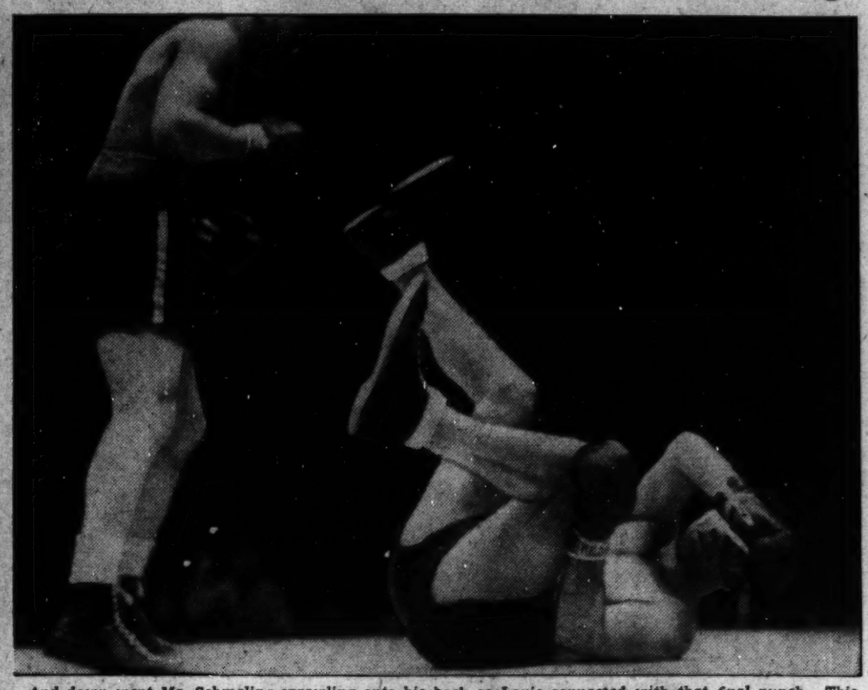
The Sock That Did It . . . . . And Down . . . And Out . . . Goes Mr. Schmeling!

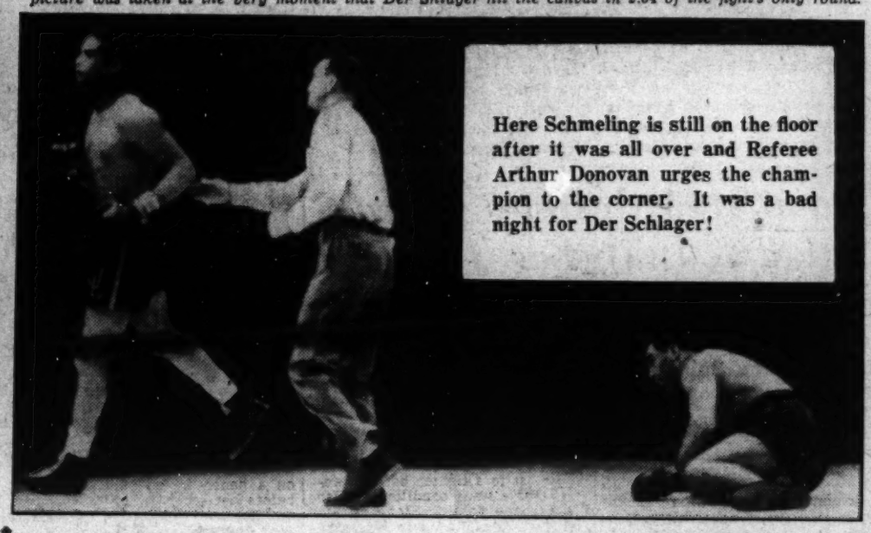


Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

Dynamite was the word for Joe Louis last night—and here's the camera's record of the sock that ended Max Schmeling's comeback hopes. Note the agonized look on Schmeling's face and the speed of Louis' right glove.



And down went Mr. Schmeling sprawling onto his back as Louis connected with that final punch. This picture was taken at the very moment that Der Schlager hit the canvas in 2:04 of the fight's only round.



Here Schmeling is still on the floor after it was all over and Referee Arthur Donovan urges the champion to the corner. It was a bad night for Der Schlager!

All Germany Is Stunned

Schmeling's Wife Sleeps Through Fight.

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Thursday), June 23.—All Germany, clustered about its short-wave radio sets in the early morning hours, was thunderstruck and almost unbelieving at the unexpected news "Unser Maxe" Schmeling had fought his way back to the heavyweight championship were dashed so suddenly that gay radio parties and cafe gatherings were quickly dampened.

Heavy-lidded Germans, who had stayed up till 3 a. m. for the short-wave broadcast only to hear a 2:04-minute fight end with dramatic dispatch, climbed into bed a saddened lot at Joe Louis' victory.

All over the Reich they had clustered in homes, restaurants and cafes to hear the fight they hoped would bring the world's championship to Germany.

It was said Adolf Hitler at his Bavarian mountain retreat was among those who heard the disheartening news.

The maid at Schmeling's Berlin home was so disappointed by the knockout she said she would not awaken Maxie's movie actress wife, Anny Ondra, who left instructions not to be aroused until after the fight.

"I think morning will be time enough to tell her," said the maid who had stayed up in hope of being able to bear her good news.

The sportsbar, where Schmeling and his cronies have a regularly reserved table, was "like a tomb," a waiter lamented after the radio told the sad story to patrons looking glumly into their beer signs.

Schmeling's German pals said their only comment was an echo of what the German announcer said at the close of his broadcast from the Yankee Stadium ringside:

"We sympathize with you, Max, although you lost as a fair sportsman.

"We will show you on your return that reports in foreign newspapers that you would be thrown into jail are untrue."

Georgie Abrams, Thomas to Spar

Georgie Abrams, 19-year-old Washington middleweight, who meets Phil Furr, for the District championship next Monday night at Griffith Stadium, will hold his first public workout tomorrow at Turner's Arena.

The workout will be at 2 o'clock.

A battery of sparmates will work with Abrams, including Buddy Thomas, the big Nashville boy, who meets Angelo Puglisi, Furr's sparmate, in a six-rounder.

Bout Causes Death.

Winchester, Ind., June 22 (AP).—Excitement over the Louis-Schmeling championship fight proved fatal tonight to Richard Hall, 63, Winchester laborer, who suffered a heart attack at the conclusion of a radio broadcast.

Chisox Shake Slump, Trounce Nats, 16 to 3

Steinbacher Sets Modern Record as Chicago Slams 17 Hits; Stratton Winning Pitcher.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 22.—Falling short—13 runs short—of tying the score in the ninth, the Nats took a brutal beating today from Chicago's South-side mob known as the White Sox.

The score was 16 to 3 and describes eloquently the harrowing time of it three Washington pitchers had trying to get the White Sox out. The Chicago Club's score by innings reads like a WPA grant; 1-3-1-2-1-3-5-0-x. Not until the eighth inning did the Sox go scoreless.

Jimmy Dykes' henchmen, supposedly the weakest hitting club in the league, experienced a grand awakening against Mr. Ferrell, Mr. Monte Weaver and Mr. Elon Hogsett, the Washington pitchers, who were pitching and ducking in virtually the same motion.

They proved the premises with 17 solid sicks and before the farce was finished, young Mr. Henry Steinbacher, late of Milwaukee, had equaled the American League record with six consecutive hits in a nine-inning game.

Big-legged young Steinbacher, a left-handed hitting outfielder, rapped out a pair of singles against Ferrell in the first two innings, slapped Monte Weaver for a single in the fourth and a double in the fifth, and then walloped a pair of rightfield singles against Hogsett in the sixth and seventh.

It was the most dismal Washington pitching exhibition of the season because in addition to those 17 Chicago hits, the Nats' hurling gentry walked 13 White Sox. At one point—in the fourth—when he issued four passes, Monte Weaver forced over two runs. Hogsett forced over a run in the seventh, but Weaver had a clear edge in the gift run department. He wild-pitched a run across the plate in the fifth.

Myer Muffs Twice.

In the one inning of the first seven that the White Sox failed to make a hit, Buddy Myer saw to it that they scored anyway. That was in the third, when Myer muffed Owen's grounder and then, on the next play, muffed Rensa's grounder for a second consecutive error. Weaver wild-pitched the run to third base and it scored on a long fly.

The Nats' hitting was nothing to brag about, either. Monty Stratton, recently recovered from a sore arm, held 'em to two useless hits in the first five innings. Then a pair of rapid-fire two-baggers by Buddy Myer and Sammy West produced a run that cut the White Sox' lead to 8 to 1.

The score was 16 to 1 when Buddy Lewis doubled against the rightfield wall in the ninth, and then Al Simmons made it look just a trifle more respectable by whacking his eighth home run of the year into the left-field seats. All told, the Nats collected only eight hits off Stratton.

Steinbacher and Rip Radcliff were the prime movers in the rout of the Washington pitching. Radcliff collected four hits. Jackie Hayes contributed three, and even Stratton himself caught the spirit of the day by whacking out three hits, including a juicy two-bagger.

Ferrell lasted only two innings. By that time he had given up four

Fight House Party a Bust

Police Keep Apartment Tenants From Roof.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 22.—House party night in the apartments overlooking the stadium was a complete bust. For years the Gerard avenue tenants have been hosts to all their friends on stadium fight nights as hundreds gathered on the rooftops with their camp chairs and binoculars. But alas! The building department stepped in and stopped the show, posting notice that no spectators would be allowed on any roof, and police were detailed to each roof to see that the order was strictly enforced. The disgruntled tenants sought a rebate on their rent.

The Nonsectarian Antinazi League and the Communist Party distributed thousands of leaflets, the former calling for a boycott of German goods and the latter merely asking three cheers for Joe and a long boo for Max.

Govs. Wilbur Cross of Connecticut, George H. Earle of Pennsylvania and Frank Murphy of Michigan, Postmaster General Farley, Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia (sitting in the sixth and last row of the working press; Tony Galento was in the second row) led the celebrity brigade which turns out in larger numbers for a heavyweight championship bout than for any other sports event.

Mike Jacobs seeks out his customers. His trailer ticket booth roamed around the stadium streets, picking off prospective customers

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, June 22.—The battered left eye of the man who once had held the greatest title in all sportdom, the world's heavyweight boxing championship, blinked a little bewilderedly.

"It was that punch in the kidney, the right kidney, look right here, that got me," he kept repeating in his guttural accent. "That punch in the right kidney. After that I was practically paralyzed. I couldn't straighten up."

Thus it was that Max Schmeling, who had bombarded the Brown Bomber two years ago, explained his absolutely unlooked for one-round knockout, tonight in his dressing room. There was nothing else he could say. All he could do was reiterate that original statement and point to his kidney.

But Schmeling, perhaps because he did not have much time to think about it, did not seem to be particularly disturbed by his defeat. Except for his half-closed right eye he seemed to have recuperated remarkably well from the punching he took. In fact he actually bristled when an interviewer asked him would he like to have another crack at Louis.

Wants Another Match.

"Yes, sure, why not?" he demanded, almost indignantly, and then he went on to explain about that kidney punch.

"It was almost the first time he hit me and after that I could not feel a thing. Not a thing."

Through two walls from the bewildered challenger sat the happy, successful champion, showing as much jubilation as it was possible for Deadpan Joe to depict even on such a momentous occasion. Seated on a dressing-room table in bare feet with a robe around his shoulders as flashlights popped with machine-gun rapidity, Joe held court, unhurt and unmarked. It was almost impossible to get close to him because the police details guarding him were busy getting his autograph.

"I was a little bit sore at Smellin' for some of the things he said," admitted the Bomber in explaining his annihilating attack that required only two minutes, not two rounds, as he had predicted.

"Max is a pretty tough guy," the champion admitted. "I started him going with a left to the body and finished him with a right to the jaw."

But you couldn't expect Joe to remember in any detail what had transpired in the ring in those two short minutes. He was too busy punching.

"Will Schmeling get another crack at the title?"

"I don't see why," answered Joe. "We're through with him now. Yeah, maybe he's through with me, too."

Louis to Sign Today.

The champion will appear at the State Athletic Commission office tomorrow to sign for the Max Baer bout in September. He plans a two-months' rest.

Joe is willing to fight anybody Mike Jacobs can dig up. He will leave for Detroit tomorrow night. He may take that pleasure trip abroad that he's been talking about.

"Berlin, too?" Joe was asked.

"I don't think so," replied the Bomber, his lips wreathed in smiles.

The Louis-Schmeling battle may have been watched by 90,000, who didn't see much of a fight, but they missed a better one. That came when scores of milling, jostling reporters and photographers, bent on interviewing the athletes and getting their reactions for the benefit of a palpitating world, engaged in a 15-minute hurlyburly with police who refused to let them in.

Police cards, special dressing room cards issued by the management and pleas and threats refused to bend the solid phalanx of police, who repulsed all comers for the length of a good five-round battle before they capitulated. In fact, the reporters took a worse beating than Schmeling, even though they won. The German was in there for slightly more than two minutes. They battled it out for 15.

Louis-Schmeling Fight by Blows

Louis took the offensive and missed two short lefts as Schmeling crouched cautiously.

Louis nailed Schmeling against the ropes and smashed Max with rights and vicious lefts.

Max shot over a short right that halted Louis' whirlwind drive.

A hard right staggered Schmeling and Louis piled in as Max leaned against the ropes.

A hard right knocked Schmeling down.

Louis followed and measured him and Schmeling went down again.

Louis smashed Max at will and floored him for a count of three.

But he was up after a count of one, only to be sprawled again with a terrific right to the jaw.

As he lay almost in the center of the ring, dazed and half conscious, with the count reaching eight, his handler, Max Machon, threw the towel into the ring and ended the fight.

The knockout came at 2:04.

Max Floored 3 Times by The Champ

Aide Tosses in Towel; German Lands Only One Good Punch.

By Lewis F. Atchison.
A Staff Correspondent.

Yankee Stadium, June 22. Joe Louis, the lethargic, chicken-eating young colored boy, reverted to his dreaded role of the "brown bomber" tonight, and successfully defended his world heavyweight boxing title against Max Schmeling's surprisingly feeble challenge by knocking him out in the first round.

Eighty thousand voices hummed in unison as Louis, not the cockey ill-trained young fighter of two years ago, floored the German three times before the fallen gladiator's second flung the towel to his rescue. Schmeling was not counted out, and his loss will be inscribed in the books as a technical knockout.

The fight probably was the easiest in Louis' brief but highly successful career. His immobile expression never changed as he lashed out at the challenger with dynamite-laden glove. It did not change as he saw him tumble three times into the resin dust. Nor was even the semblance of a smile on his frozen countenance when his arm was raised in token of victory.

Schmeling Lands One.

Schmeling landed only one blow, an impotent overhand right that clopped off the titleholder's chin with no visible effect. The challenger never reached the center of the ring. He didn't get 10 feet from his corner before the Negro nailed him. He was strictly on the defensive from the outset, and it wasn't a very effective defense.

Louis pinned him on the ropes with left hooks as a seamstress might tack a hem and held him there until he dropped him. He smashed three left hoops to his jaw, virtually paralyzing the stunned German. He crossed him with a right and Schmeling sagged into the ropes and slumped to the floor.

He landed on his shoulder, rolled over like a football player recovering a fumble, and got back up on his feet at the count of five. He was pointed toward a neutral corner when Louis, working deliberately like a veteran craftman, momentarily measured him and whisked two more left hooks to his jaw and crossed him with a right. Max went down again bleary-eyed and finished, physically.

But the heart that brought the ageing Teuton back from obscurity to another chance at the title he once held, still ticked, and he clambered up on wobbly legs at the count of three. An amateur could have finished him now. Too dizzy to know the count, he tried to regain his rubbery pins before Referee Arthur Donovan could count him out.

Louis took another brief but careful measurement, and bashed him with a right hook to the jaw. Schmeling flopped forward like a kid playing leap frog, and his outstretched arms prevented him from going completely down. He was trying to straighten himself up and resume fighting when Max Machon, his trainer, tossed in the towel.

Schmeling attempted to use the same plan of battle he employed so successfully two years ago when he knocked out Louis in 12 rounds at this same stadium. He lay back in a crouch, right hand held high and cocked, awaiting Louis' first move. The champion was not bashful about making one, and moved in with two jabs and a crunching right to the kidney.

A look of mingled fear and amazement came into the Dutchman's eyes as he tried to move beyond range of the Detroit puncher's big guns. His forehead was furrowed with worried wrinkles, and his beetle-like eyebrows were drawn tightly over his eyes.

Louis was sent out with instructions to forget Max's right, to charge into him and throw punches, and he obeyed instructions perfectly. Schmeling's inability to cope with his fierce, methodical attack, amazed the spectators. They hadn't expected a one-sided fight of that nature. But there was Louis crowding him, almost stepping on his toes and punching, and Schmeling retreating in a vain effort to find a haven of safety.

Louis was first in the ring and was greeted but mildly in contrast to the thunderous ovation which greeted Schmeling's arrival. He took his seat quietly and his handlers began to tie on the mittens.

Ross Like Schmeling.

Schmeling's actions were curiously akin to those of Barney Ross the night he dropped his welterweight crown to Henry Armstrong. He bowed to the throng in acknowledgment of its throaty cheers, then smilingly strode over and offered his hand to the champion.

Ross did identically the same thing when he entered the ring for his losing bout.

One minute after the bout's end Max was in possession of his normal faculties, and again he walked over to congratulate the victor. But this time a sad smile adorned his face.

He was unmarked. All but three of Louis' punches landed cleanly on his jaw. The others thumped up against the Uhlan's forehead, leaving a pink rash. Louis, of course, had not even the slightest mark of battle on him. More damaging to him, to the eye, was Max Baer, who rubbed his crinkly hair playfully when he entered the ring to be introduced.

Tomorrow there will be a meeting at the New York Athletic Commission offices to determine, if possible, the exact date and site of the next heavyweight title fight, which will find Max Baer challenging the Negro for the crown. San Francisco interests are bidding for the match, and Promoter Mike Jacobs has let it be known that he intends to take plenty of time before selecting the location.

Carmen Barth, Cleveland, outpointed Al Ceccoza, 165, Harlem, six rounds.

Jorge Brescia, 211¼, Argentina, outpointed Alex Kettles, 205, Southbend, Ind., six rounds.

Baltimore, June 22.—Thirty-eight golfers, thirty-seven of them ambitious to win the Maryland Junior championship and one hopeful of keeping it, will open the tournament for the junior crown here tomorrow.

In that tourney, Greiner disposed of Brownell, 4 and 3, a feat that boosted his rating in tomorrow's tourney to an extent disturbing to Brownell's backers.

Bout Was Eighth In Ring History Under 4 Rounds

New York, June 22 (AP).—Joe Louis' record-breaking victory over Max Schmeling was the eighth heavyweight championship bout in modern ring history which was ended in three rounds or less.

Louis' time of 2:04 of the first round in halting Schmeling stands at the top of the list. The other seven were:

Tommy Burns knocked out Bill Squires, one round, 1907.

Jack Dempsey knocked out Luis Angel Firpo, 57 seconds of second round, 1923.

Jim Jeffries knocked out Jack Monroe, two rounds, 1904.

Jack Dempsey knocked out Billy Miske, three rounds, 1920.

Jack Dempsey stopped Jess Willard after three rounds, 1919 (Willard failed to answer bell for fourth round).

Joe Louis knocked out Nathan Mann, three rounds, 1938.

Jim Corbett beat Charley Mitchell, three rounds, 1894.

Dempsey set the record for the quickest heavyweight knockout when he halted Fred Fulton in 14 seconds, 1918.

Meanwhile E. Harcourt, husband of the defeated women's finalist—and C. B. Oler, of New York, moved into the men's singles finals and will meet for the title today at 2:30 p. m.

The men's doubles final also will be played today with S. B. Crary, of Schenectady, N. Y., and E. R. Hubbard, of Denver, meeting A. O. White and L. W. Bates, both of this city. This match is scheduled for 5:30.

Helen Jacobs In Collapse

Wimbledon, England, June 22 (AP).—America's two famous Helens stole the show at Wimbledon again today—Helen Wills Moody by taking the first step toward her eighth all-England women's tennis title and Helen Jacobs by fainting in a dressing room.

At the end of almost a year of imperfect health and 15 pounds underweight, Miss Jacobs collapsed on a bench in the clubhouse just before her scheduled match against the British Wightman Cup player, Joan Ingram.

The match was postponed until tomorrow, and Miss Jacobs was taken away by a physician. She will not know until tomorrow morning, when she sees the doctor again, whether she will be able to continue. Miss Jacobs had been suffering from a nerve injury in her right arm for several weeks.

Wearing her familiar eyeshade and a flaming scarlet sweater, Mrs. Moody seemed determined not to run any more than necessary in her opening bid for her eighth all-England title. She played well enough, however, to defeat Mrs. Harry C. Hopman, Australia, 6—3, 6—4, although Mrs. Hopman's firm forehands to Helen's background produced more winning points than the crowd thought possible.

Miss Marble gave up four games before hitting her stride, and Budge lost to Henry Billington, but it would be inadvisable for their future opponents to place undue importance on today's showing. Miss Marble, seeded No. 2 back of Mrs. Moody, rallied after her slow start to eliminate Sheila Piercy, of South Africa, 6—4, 6—0, and Budge disposed of the Berkshire farmer, 7—5, 6—1, 6—1.

Lentz Out At Catholic

Catholic University's new athletic policy which is predicated on strict economy yesterday claimed its fifth victim in the athletic department during the last year when George A. Lentz, Cardinal trainer the past six years, announced his resignation has been accepted by Arthur J. Bergman, director of athletics.

Though he declared last night that he had not asked a raise in salary for next year, Lentz intimated that his move had been prompted by salary differences and inability to get along with certain officials at the school. He immediately declared, however, that Bergman was not one of these "officials."

Lentz, who has been responsible for several valuable inventions of training room gadgets is the fifth member of the C. U. athletic department to leave within the last 12 months, by resignation or dismissal.

Lentz has had no offers, he said, but is on the lookout for another position and is expected to make a connection in the East before next football season. Before joining the Cardinal staff, Lentz served as trainer at Dickinson Seminary and for the Williamsport Baseball Club.

Though rumors have it that he has been "felt out" by a certain team in the National Professional Football League, associates believe Lentz may return to Williamsport.

Sandlot Pick-ups

Strictly Prince George's County: Of the estimated 11,000,000 players of both sexes that participate in the popular game of softball, 27 of that number, belonging to the stronger sex, forgot about the other 10,999,973 and went seriously to work last Tuesday on the baseball field at College Park to decide the county service champions in games whose proceeds will be devoted to children's recreation . . . Three squads representing the Lions, Rotarians, and Kiwanis Clubs, in a tripartite affair, played two five inning tilts, but no champions were crowned.

After tossing a coin to decide which two teams would meet in the opener, it befell the lot of the Rotarians to toss the first ball to a Lions batter . . . With Professor Reubin Steinmeyer, teacher of political science at Maryland University, doing a great job on the mound for the Rotary Club, the Lions behaved like lambs, and the result was a 6-1 victory for Steinmeyer and his playmates . . . But the hitting and fielding of George Cook, centerfielder; Les Bopst, associate Maryland State chemist; Ungene Auchter, Rotary Club's incoming president, who played first base; and George Pollock, third baseman, aided the winners quite a bit.

It was left for the second game to provide the spectators—what there were of them—with the thrills and spills of the day . . . What started out to be a jovial engagement between the Kiwanis and Rotary club nines took on all the seriousness and tenseness of a big league world's series battle . . . Steinmeyer was still hurling for the Rotarians, and Cribby Hughes was in the box for the Kiwanians . . . And the runs were hard to get . . . The score was tied 4-all—it had been that way since the third frame—at the end of the fifth . . . This necessitated an extra inning . . . But still neither club could shove across a tally . . . So with darkness casting a shadow over the playing field, game was called without a titleholder declared.

During the last three frames the fielding of both teams was flawless . . . Kirk Beasley, third baseman; Bill Bowie, leftfileder; and Ned Duncan, president of the Kiwanis club and first baseman, starred with Hughes for the Kiwanis nine . . . The Rotarians mentioned previously were still the big guns . . . Your correspondent was attempting to hold down the short stop job for the Kiwanians . . . But after being called out for leaving first base too soon, he was accused of playing for the Rotarians . . . All in all, it was a lot of fun . . . There is only one thing remaining to be done . . . The two clubs should meet again . . . It would be a Prince George's County sandlot classic.

Upset Marks Girls College Net Play

Brookline, Mass., June 22 (AP).—Unseeded Elaine Fischel, of the University of California, provided the girls' intercolegiate tennis tournament with its first major upset by eliminating the second seeded Virginia Hitt, of Lake Erie, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2, late today in a quarterfinals match at Longwood. The only other player in the field to gain the semi-finals was Louise Raymond, of Smith, the top-seeded entry, who turned back Dorothy Brun, of Radcliffe, 6—2, 6—3.

Clay Court Tennis Postponed by Rain

Chicago, June 22 (AP).—Rain drenched the courts at the River Forest Tennis Club today and caused postponement of third and fourth round matches in the National City Clay Courts tennis tournament.

Although the skies cleared late in the afternoon, the courts were pronounced unfit for play and matches were rescheduled for tomorrow morning. The opening round of doubles play also was scheduled for tomorrow.

Ex-Batting Champ Quits

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 22.—Big Dale Alexander, once the scourge of big league pitchers, may be through with baseball.

Alexander, who led American League hitters, while playing with Boston in 1932 refused today to report to Dallas of the Texas League. Joe Engel, president of the Chattanooga Lookouts, announced yesterday he had traded Alexander to Dallas for First Baseman Phil Todt.

"If I can't finish the year in the Southern I'm through," the 35-year-old Alexander asserted. "I had planned to quit at the end of the year and retire to my 117-acre farm at Greenville, Tenn."

Engel said Alexander's decision would not affect the trade.

Alex broke into professional baseball in 1923 with Greenville of the Appalachian League. Two years with Charlottee, N. C., and two with Toronto took him to Detroit.

In 1932 he went to Boston and that same year nosed out Jimmy Foxx for the league batting championship with a .368 average.

Alexander still has his batting eye but he has been slow afoot. A few weeks ago a foot injury added to his handicap.

Jadaan Registers Easy Victory in Feature Race at Charles Town

Fast Finish Nets Victory; Pays $8.20

Royal Business Second; Pansy's First Is Third.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 22.—L. L. Westmoreland's Jadaan, in trouble in three previous handicaps here and beaten by scant margins, came through with a smashing effort today to win the Kay Jewelry Co. Handicap, sponsored by the Washington firm. With Jockey Mannie Berg in the saddle, Jadaan came to the front in the stretch run and finished a length in front of Royal Business, half of the E. Johnston entry. Pansy's First, with the little-known Apprentice J. Peck in the saddle, was a surprise third.

For the first time at this meeting a field of nine competed, officials generally confining the starting groups to eight horses. Despite the bulky field, there was little rough riding but Royal Business and Jaberie had some excuses. The former was pulled up sharply by Jockey Palumbo when blocked in the early stages while Jabberie lacked racing room to the backstretch.

Jadaan Pays $8.20.

Jadaan, a beaten favorite in his previous start, paid an $8.20 mutuel and ran the Charles Town Course of slightly more than six furlongs in 1:17 1-5 over a fast track.

Castabout set the early pace, accompanied by Pansy's First, but Jockey Berg had Jadaan within striking distance. It was not until the stretch was reached that Castabout began to falter. Berg then drove Jadaan to the top to stay. Palumbo had Royal Business driving in the stretch but the filly could only whittle down the winner's final margin.

Justa Giro, with Leon Garrett aboard, scored an easy victory for the favorite players in the first race. The daughter of Flying Ebony went to the front at the break and was not menaced, winning by three lengths over Cat's Cradle, with Happy Chase third. The winner paid a mere $4.40.

Ktwo Scores in Second.

B. Richardson's KKtwo, well handled by Jockey J. Taylor, took the second race by a length and a half, with Six o'Clock closest at the end. Third money in the limit field of eight went to Magic Line. Taylor had Ktwo well placed from the start and brought her through on the rail entering the stretch, to win going away. She paid $9.60.

Xmas Carol proved much the best in the third race. Beaten as far as you can throw a ball last time out, the High Strung filly led throughout today, to pay $7. Mary Allen was second and Hogarty third.

Sammy Palumbo won with Topsie H. in the fourth race, bringing the 9-year-old mare home three lengths in advance of Any Woman. Custer had a lot of trouble, but was third. Palumbo jammed through the pack going to the first turn, got his mount to the front and there she stayed. A $5.20 mutuel price was displayed.

Canteret, at $13.60, brought Jockey Garrett his second winner of the day. This mare, an 8-year-old, took command at once and led all the way. Newgro was second throughout, while Gagne closed a little ground, to be third.

King's Heir Equals Record at Detroit

Detroit, June 22 (AP).—The Dixiana Stable's King's Heir equaled the track record for a mile and 70 yards at the Fair Grounds today by covering the distance in 1:42 to take the sixth and feature race. The mark was established by Genteel Lady in 1936.

King's Heir finished three lengths in front of Zevson, the favorite. Chalphone was a nose behind Zevson.

King's Heir, second choice in the betting, paid $5.40 to win, $3 to place and $2.40 to show for $2 tickets. Zevson returned $2.60 and $2.40, while Chalphone paid $2.40.

The latter was knocked back approaching backstretch, worked his way to contention and was going fastest at end. CASTABOUT set pace and weakened in closing stages.

The latter saved much ground when outrun, came through on inside entering stretch and closed with rush. HELEN BAB was taken up sharply during opening furlong after breaking in front, lost ground on swing to stretch and weakened in closing stages. BEST POLICY and ADO had early speed.

JIMMY D., steadied along when forwardly placed for half, came between horses to better position, took command entering stretch and barely lasted ahead of LITTLE PERCY'S drive. HEART PLAY tired in stretch after being in tight quarters.

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

C. J. Fitzgerald is shipping 14 horses from here to Hagerstown for the Hub City meeting opening on July 12. P. H. Faulconer has sold the horse Tavern to C. W. Gordon at private terms. Shebang, recently claimed, is reported to have broken down in that last race. Jockey Gene Terhune, injured here when Trostar fell, is hobbling about on crutches and hopes to be up again at Hagerstown. Counter Pass was found to be sick by the track veterinarian which accounted for the scratch. Pegadete has been placed on the schooling list. S. B. Webb is considering shipping his horses to Canada at the conclusion of the horse show meeting here. The jockey standing follows: Lou Machada, 33; Buddy Root, 30, and Beverly Hacker, 30. "Chuck" Frost says Hacker will win the jockey championship and the gold watch that goes with it. "Hacker is a cinch," says Chuck, "the apprentice allowance will help him." Machado gets back into action on Friday. The Goose Creek Tavern Purse tops the Thursday program and has drawn a field of ten sprinters including Morning Flight, Schley Buck, Philigal and others. Harvey Ball will furnish a prize for the winning owner. Somebody said that Willie Obert on Custer looked like "Custer's last fight." Even at that, Obert had a lot of trouble and finished third. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Justa Canter seems to have an edge over this field. Tractable is fit as hands can make horses and should be close up. Boro Poker flashed some speed last out and could be a money factor.

Second race—Cautious Bo carries 119 pounds and is not best suited at this route. However, this one has shown so much speed of late we may get in on a fair price. I'm going to string alone. Poll Parrot should go well in this field. Lady Luck to take care of the others. Mud would give Handley an excellent chance.

Third race—Solar Ray tossed in this maiden affair with only 101 pounds appears to be the right one. Kil Clap stumbled at the break last out and is dangerous. Wanocha to take care of the others. Sea Boy, Needmore and Mudsill, on the reserve list, will be formidable if in action.

Fourth race—Counsellor Billy may take the lead here and forget to stop. I understand Hacker will do the booting. Lovely Amelia would be better suited at a longer route, but she should give a good account of herself. Smear would be a real threat on an off track.

Fifth race—Morning Flight has too many speed guns for this crowd. I do believe. Root should provide the right ride. Schley Buck and Philigal for the place and show.

Sixth race—The entry of Aella and Silver G. seems well placed in this field. The first named is the chief reliance of the trainer. Hurdy Gurdy, is an "in and outer," and might awaken. Caldon has plenty of early lick.

Seventh race—Prince Khayyam may do a lot of running in this field and a set of brackets would not surprise me. Tuleyries Lad, with Root up, will be a threat. Zac Time, in light and breaking off the rail, could be the medium of an upset.

Eighth race—Lady Cirek may be the right one in this rather open race. Has the speed and the courage necessary. Pukka Heaven can better that last, but seems to have had too much racing. Dixie Bee goes back to a route she likes.

Ninth race (substitute)—If this race is used, I'll take Leach Fern, Perfect Host and Bah's Choice.

Indians Sweep Doubleheader With Yankees, Winning, 3-1, 7-1

Tribe's Lead Increased to 3½ Games

67,459 Fans See Allen and Harder Tame Champions.

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 22.—Riding along on the breaks, a timely hitting attack and Johnny Allen's four-hit pitching, the Indians trampled the New York Yankees in both ends of a double-header today and climbed 3½ games in front of the American League pack.

A crowd of 67,459, second largest to jam Municipal Stadium since it was opened six years ago, saw the Tribe hand Lefty Gomez a "heartbreaker" 3 to 1 setback in the opener and then combine a 14-hit assault with Allen's pitching mastery to breeze in with the nightcap, 7 to 1.

Gomez's two-run wild throw in the first inning of the opener set up a three-run rally for the Tribe. After that was over, El Goofy gave the Indians only one hit the rest of the way, but the damage was done and the Yanks were unable to come back as Mel Harder and Johnny Humphries pitched their way out of the tight spots to hang onto the slim lead.

The nightcap triumph was Allen's ninth win of the year, compared to one setback. Bruce Campbell's homer with two aboard in the third inning featured the Tribe assault on Monte Pearson and Joe Beggs, which didn't stop until five hits brought in the final three runs in the eighth.

The double win, coupled with the defeat of the second-place Boston Red Sox in Detroit, left the Trioe 3½ games in front of the Sox and 4½ ahead of the Yanks. It was the Indians' third in a row over the World Champions, and the fifth setback in seven starts for the once mighty murderers' row.

Man of the Month

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties' "Man of the Month.")

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

Al Simmons who has been making notable gains in the Man of the Month contest recently, continued his meritorious play yesterday despite the Nats' fiasco at Chicago. Thus:

To Simmons, four points, because he made two of the Nats' eight hits, and because one of them was a homer with a man on base in the ninth which accounted for two of the Nats' three runs.

To Sammy West, three points, because he contributed a single and a double to the Nats' attack.

To Cecil Travis, three points, because he contributed two singles and hit the ball hard on his every appearance at the plate.

THE SCORE:

Buddy Lewis	22	Taft Wright	7
Zeke Bonura	18	Ken Chase	6
Buddy Myer	18	Wes Ferrell	6

Joe Louis Won . . . . . And Everybody on U Street Is Happy!

before the speculators could get to them.

June 22 marked the first anniversary of the crowning of Joe Louis in his knockout of James J Braddock.

From the looks of things inside the stadium, the speculators did a land office business. They were getting up to $100 a ticket for the first four ringside rows, if you believe everything you hear. A fellow who paid face value of $30 for his ringside seat was hard to find.

There is not much about seat arrangement that Mike Jacobs does not know. Ostensibly there were only 37 rows of ringside, back of the working press, but if you looked carefully you discovered row 6A, 9A, 12A and 15A had been worked into the layout.

The priceless Hope Diamond was at the fight, accompanied by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, who owns it. But even the diamond could not dim the splendor of Lucius Beebe, who escorted Mrs. McLean.

It's amazing the people who work their way into the working press section on such an occasion. Robert Taylor had a second row seat. He even looked like a newspaper man, his shirt collar opened, his hair disheveled.

By request of Jacobs' staff, all ringside heads were denuded of hats—even the baldheaded fellows swallowed their pride and complied.

District Tourney Entries to Close Tomorrow Night

Entries for the District Men's championship tennis tournament will close tomorrow evening at 6 o'clock at the Columbia Country Club tennis shop.

The committee for the annual event, composed of Chairman Joseph Marr, Owen Hoenstein, Buddy Dawson and Frank (Buddy) Goeltz, reported last night that a near-record entry is expected and that virtually all of the leading local players will compete.

Hugh Lynch, Dooly Mitchell, Barney Welsh, the city's three outstanding amateur singles players already have entered, and Gil Hunt, another veteran, who has been at or around the top for years, will do so if he is in town.

Entries should be forwarded to the Columbia Tennis Shop, in care of Buddy Goeltz.

Case's Injury To Keep Rookie On Bench Today

Chicago, June 22.—George Washington Case, the Nats' sensational rookie outfielder who has hit safely for a .470 average in the last 12 games, will be absent from the line-up for at least two more days.

Case's wounded thigh, suffered when he crashed against a water spigot protruding from the right-field fence yesterday, has not yet yet healed. He suffered a deep gash below the right hip and is still limping painfully.

Trainer Mike Martin ordered a stitch taken in the wound.

The Nats' defeat today finds them with five defeats and only four victories to show for their nine games on the road thus far. Tomorrow Dutch Leonard and his knuckle ball will take the mound against the White Sox.

Giants Beat Reds by 6-4

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 22.—The Giants finally caught up with the Cincinnati Reds today, exploded a five-run barrage in the seventh and eighth innings and came through with a 6-to-4 victory to stretch their National League lead to 2½ games.

The Reds, seeking their second straight win over the Giants, had all the better of the early going. Going into the seventh, they had a 5-to-1 lead over the Giants and Harry Gumbert, on Ival Goodman's seventeenth homer with a mate aboard in the third and Ernie Lombardi's tenth circuit clous with the bags empty in the sixth.

Macks Win Over Browns

St. Louis, June 22.—A successful double steal in the first inning, with Lou Finney scoring, set the stage for a 7-to-1 victory for the Philadelphia Athletics over the St. Louis Browns today.

The A's continued to play heads up ball and put the game on ice in the sixth when they found the former sailor, Howard Mills, for four extra base hits which were good for as many runs.

Harland Clift's sixth homer of the season in the third accounted for the Browns' only run.

Louis Fans Hurt 7 Here

threw a stone. He was cut about the arms and shoulders. His sister had 21 stitches taken in her left arm when treated at Sibley Hospital. Police made no arrests.

Hundreds of "trouble" calls were received at Police Headquarters during the night.

Special details of police patrolled the streets. At headquarters 150 men were held in reserve, and 20 motorcycle policemen.

From the standpoint of false alarms of fire, it was a less explosive celebration than came after the Louis-Braddock fight. Nine were turned in near Fourteenth and U streets within a half hour on that occasion. Last night there were only two.

The sudden ending of the fight in the first round was as unexpected to the radio listeners on U street as it must have been to Max. Joe had promised them that it would not happen until round 2.

When they recovered from their astonishment, a mighty "Yow!" arose and rolled down U street.

"I told you so!" cried one ecstatic fan, as he rushed into a liquor store.

"I bet Max don't go back to Berlin now," exulted another.

"Joe was doped the first time," said several, recalling his defeat at Schmeling's hands two years ago.

Two men walked along U street bearing a huge placard of Schmeling. On top of it was a dead cat.

Some celebrants blew off steam by throwing rocks through store and car windows, and one group tried to tip over a street car. Several automobiles were overturned.

Automobiles, some of them carrying incredible loads of cheering colored boys, raced up and down U street, their horns joining in a wild symphony of joy.

Firecrackers that had been bought for the Fourth of July came out of hiding and were set off, flares were lighted and gallons of whisky were downed—all in honor of the slugger from Alabama's cane brakes.

A Post reporter, mingling with the multitude, encountered only one colored cynic on U street. This man, watching the howling throng, observed:

"Joe Louis is a rich man tonight. If he came along here tonight, he wouldn't have anything to do with these people who are yelling their heads off."

But he was very much of a minority.

13 Police Hurt in Harlem.

New York, June 22 (U.P.).—Thirteen policemen were injured, one seriously, tonight when rioting broke out in the heart of Harlem as more than 400,000 persons celebrated Joe Louis' quick victory over Max Schmeling.

Police Commissioner Valentine visited the district immediately after the fight and said that "everything is under control."

"It's their night; let them have their fun," he said.

80,000 See Louis Beat Max; German Is Floored 3 Times

heavyweight crown, never had a chance after the bell rang for the first round.

Louis, justifying his own prediction of a short finish, achieved it one round sooner than he expected, with a two-fisted onslaught that champion in history to regain the left the crowd as excited as Schmeling was dizzy after it was all over.

The champion took command on the first exchange, belted Schmeling unmercifully about the head, and quickly had the German in distress. Max was on the verge of going down within the first minute, but covered and hung grimly to the ropes, near his own corner, as he tried desperately to save himself.

Finally forced into the open, Schmeling went down on hi side, with a rolling motion, after being clipped with a hard right to the head. He was already so groggy that he took no heed of either the count or warning yells from his own corner. He struggled to his feet, after only three seconds, only to meet another withering blast.

On his second knockdown, Schmeling sprawled to all fours, after Louis fired both hands to his jaw. The German's eyes were glassy, his mouth open, but his courage somehow pulled him back to his feet, after a count of only one.

Referee Arthur Donovan, rushing between the two as he waved Louis aside, grabbed Schmeling's gloves to wipe them on his shirt, then stepped aside. Panther-like, measuring his man, Louis stepped in quickly to deliver the finishing punch. His right shot out, landed heavily on Schmeling's jaw, and the German went down for the last time.

Max rolled over on his side, instinctively trying to regain his feet, but there wasn't a chance he could do so. At the count of eight, Max Maehon, Schmeling's trainer, tossed the towel into the ring and rushed to the aid of the beaten man.

It was thus a technical knockout victory for the champion, but it hardly could have been more devastating or complete.

Schmeling did not land a single damaging punch and only once connected with the right hand that spelled defeat for Louis two years ago. He countered solidly with his right soon after Louis had rushed him at the outset. Joe said afterward that he felt the blow but it didn't even cause him to blink, nor was it followed by anything resembling the attack that made the German a fistic hero in 1936.

Schmeling insisted afterward he was partly paralyzed by a left with which Louis hit him, over the left kidney, after about a minute had elapsed, but the paralyzing effect of Joe's punches to the German's jaw were far more obvious and convincing.

Undaunted, the German went so far, in his dressing room, as to insist he would like a third crack at Louis. But there was not the slightest question of supremacy in the minds of all onlookers.

The crowd didn't quite fill the Yankee Stadium, but fans contributed more than $900,000 to the total "take."

The throng and the gate receipts were the biggest since Louis knocked out Max Baer in four rounds, in the same park, before a near-million-dollar house three years ago. Baer, making a comeback of his own and ambitious to seek the title objective that was belted out of Schmeling's reach tonight, was among the spectators but saw nothing calculated to encourage his aspirations. Nevertheless a return Baer-Louis bout is in the making, for this September.

Louis was a 2-to-5 favorite, in ringside betting, but he fought like a man determined to prove there was no reason whatever to speculate upon the outcome. The man he was supposed to "fear" all but came apart under the deadly impact of his punches. The outcome not only proved that a blast on the chin is far more effective than psychology but satisfied the Louis backers that Joe's defeat of two years ago now could be ascribed definitely to overconfidence or an "accident" or both.

By avenging the one black mark on his record Louis removed any lingering question of his right to be champion of the world.

His knockout tonight was his fourth successful defense of the crown he won from James J. Braddock in Chicago a year ago. It also completed his "grand slam" of conquest over all the fighters who have worn the title since Gene Tunney retired, undefeated, in 1928. Schmeling's scalp finally was added to the list, including Braddock, Primo Carnera, Max Baer and Jack Sharkey, all by knockouts.

runs and Bucky Harris hurriedly got him out. Weaver was his successor, but he was no success. Monte yielded a run in the third inning and then encountered that awful fourth in which he walked four men and forced over a pair of runs. After he had wild-pitched another run home in the fifth, the Sox had an 8-0 lead.

Hogsett got the job at the start of the sixth and compared to him, Ferrell and Weaver were shining successes. The Chief pitched three runs at the White Sox in the sixth and five in the seventh.

The upshot of it all was that the Nats descended into a fourth-place tie with the Tigers, who were licking the Red Sox over in Detroit.

Trans-Golf Surprise Win To Bill Holt

Johnny Dawson Loses in Extra Holes; Kingsley Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Lincoln, Nebr., June 22.—Thirty-two matches started many a blaze in the first round of the Transmissisippi Golf tournament today, and when the smoke had cleared the title hopes of several favorites were ashes.

As defending champion, Don Schumacher, of Dallas, and Medalist Ed Kingsley, of Salt Lake City, marched along with the survivors, such outstanding threats as Johnny Dawson, of Chicago; Grable Duvall, jr., and Glenn Oatman, both of Kansas City; Herb Deurmeyer, of Lincoln, and Guy Underwood, of Oklahoma City, were discussed in the past tense.

The day's competition, in addition to putting favorites in the gallery for the second round, sliced the field to 32 contenders, including 9 from Nebraska, 5 from Texas, 4 each from Missouri and Colorado, 3 each from Kansas and Oklahoma, 2 from Utah and 1 each from New York and Minnesota.

Schumacher, hard-pressed by Rugged Matt Zadalis of Omaha the first nine holes, put on steam to win, 4 and 3. Kingsley, shooting the same steady game which brought him medal honors yesterday with a 68, was one under par in coasting to an 8 and 7 win over Chuck Taylor, husky Dallas basketball expert.

The Dawson-Bill Holt match offered the day's highlight, with Trailer Bill of Syracuse taking a 1 up decision by sinking a 25-foot putt for a par and a halve on the 18th green. Duvall bowed to a dark horse, Gene Christensen of Northfield, Minn., 1 up, as Christensen matched his opponent's birdie on the last hole.

Oatman ran into a firecracker in Harry Kaufman of Lincoln. Oatman was even par, but Kaufman was three under to win, 4 and 3. Deurmeyer, who had a qualifying 69, three under par, was eliminated by E. J. Rogers of Oklahoma City, 2 up, and Underwood, Oklahoma State champion, bowed to Noble Chalfant of Denver, 1 up.

Other favorites cleared the first hurdle. Walter Blevins, Missouri champion, downed Don Pegler of Lincoln, 3 and 2; O'Hara Watts of Dallas won over Bob Conliff, jr., 2 and 1; Harry Todd of Dallas eliminated Blaine Young of Omaha, 4 and 2, and Gordon McEntire of Lincoln uncorked a three-under-par 33 going out in defeating Billy Cordingley of Des Moines, 5 and 4.

Heavy Receipts Good Weather Lower Wheat

Lack of Export Business Contributes to 1⅝ Cents Decline.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 22.—Notwithstanding brisk upturns of securities, the Chicago Wheat Market tumbled as much as 1⅝ cents a bushel today, and showed but little power to rally.

Increased harvest movement of the new domestic winter crop in the Southwest, together with forecasts of showers and cooler temperatures needed for the growth of the spring crop Northwest, acted to pull Chicago prices down. In addition, late dispatches from Kansas, the Nation's premier producer of wheat, implied that the State's crop was too far along to suffer any great damage from black rust, although the quality of a considerable volume would be lowered.

Only scattered export business either in United States or Canadian wheat was confirmed, and this circumstance served as a persistent drag on values.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅞-1⅜ lower compared with yesterday's finish, July 75¼@75⅛, September 77@77⅛, corn unchanged to ¼ higher, July 57⅜@57½, September 58⅝, oats ⅛-⅜ off, rye ¼ to 1 cent down, and provisions varying from 35 cents decline to 5 cents advance.

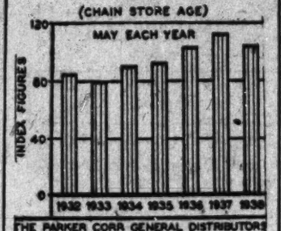
May Chain Sales 8% Below Year Ago



Boston, June 22.—Sales by our chain stores in May were slightly under April sales and dropped nearly 8 per cent from a year ago. However, this is much better than it may seem. Saturday is a big day for the chain stores and May of last year had five Saturdays, whereas May of this year had only four Saturdays.

Cotton Reacts From Long Rise

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 22.—Cotton turned reactionary today, following seven consecutive days of advancing prices which had aggregated almost 1 cent a pound. October sold off from 8.60 to 8.47, then recovered to 8.64 and closed at 8.58. Final prices were 2 to 5 points net lower.

The market opened 3 to 4 points lower, with steady Liverpool cables offset by profit taking, liquidation and moderate foreign selling. Prices sold off to net losses of 15 to 16 points by mid-day under local selling influenced by a less unfavorable weekly weather report than had been anticipated.

Japan a Heavy Buyer Of Wool Top Futures

New York, June 22 (AP).—A near record day in wool top futures, attributed in part by traders as due to heavy Japanese buying, sent prices soaring .15 of a cent a pound for a time, but profit taking before the close whittled down the lead to a net final gain of .3 to .7 of a cent.

Trading sources estimated total sales for the day exceeded 1,100,000 pounds. Other favorable factors were the recent firmness of commodity markets generally and the optimism engendered by the plan for WPA purchases of $10,000,000 of clothing.

Steel Output Registers Rise For 2d Week

National Operating Rate, Now 28%, Has Gained 3% in Fortnight.

New York, June 22.—"For the first time since late March the national rate of steel plant operations has gained in two consecutive weeks and ingot output is now at 28 per cent, up 2 points from last week and 3 points above the 25 per cent rate of two weeks ago," says Iron Age today in its weekly summary, which adds:

"More important than this modest strengthening of mill schedules is a growing feeling that business generally this summer will not be so slack as expected and that foundation for a fair measure of recovery in the fall is slowly being laid.

"This week the steel industry notes a strengthening of the scrap market, with the Iron Age composite price 25c higher at $11.25 (the first advance in 20 weeks); it received the first order for steel for 1939 automobiles, found that many buyers inactive since early spring are back in the market, and reported that bookings for most companies are running 10 per cent or more ahead of May.

"From most steel producing centers come reports of small rush orders, reflecting scanty inventories, a growing diversification of outlets for the mills and scattered gains in production, with the Wheeling-Weirton area up 3 points to 43 per cent, Chicago up a point to 24½, Youngstown up 4 points to 27, and Detroit up 10 points to 29½. Cleveland-Lorain district schedules dipped a point to 22, while Birmingham dropped 9 points to 39, and Pittsburgh held unchanged at 22 per cent.

Price Concessions.

"What effect price concessions are having on new business is uncertain. Illustrating the highly competitive nature of the steel industry, prices for some products are subject to concessions. Following the resent reduction of $3 a ton in galvanized sheets, drum stock sheets have been moved down $3 a tone and reinforcing bars are officially quoted at $5 a ton lower. The price structure faces a further period of testing. This is in direct contrast to the situation in nonferrous metals, where efforts of producers, both here and abroad, to balance production with consumption have caused a strongly bullish undertone in all markets, accompanied by expectations of higher prices.

"Regarding wages, with which the general steel price structure is considered closely tied, the Iron Age has learned that no formal step leading to reduction in labor rates has been taken, and the leading steel producers apparently still are content to let the business trend over the next few months determine their attitude toward wage revisions.

Third Day of Strong Bull Market Carries Stocks $3 to $5 Higher.

New York, June 22.—The third successive day of sharp advances on the New York Stock Exchange carried prices through their April and May tops with a rush. The financial community was a bit breathless as it scrambled for stocks at prices about $3 to $5 above the levels at which it would take them only last Saturday. Probably no community in the world is as mercurial as Wall Street. To the average board room trader, they all look good when they're going up. The man on the flying trapeze could not possibly fly through the air with greater ease than the customary customers' room customer changes from a bear to a bull. Saturday the end of the world was near at hand; today it was just a question how high they would go.

The rapidity of the advance has surprised the oldtimers, who have seen this thing happen before, many a time and oft. Indeed, the fact that the current move is being bucked by the skeptics may have something to do with the fact that the upswing has lasted three days. For it is a good thing for any advance to have a few shorts step in on the way up. It helps put off the inevitable correction.

That such short selling has been taking place is indicated by the volume of odd-lot trading. It used to be that odd-lot transactions—that is, the blocks of stocks less than 100 shares—came into the market only from the small speculators who could not handle a round lot. Now the odd-lot transactions are coming from the bigger speculators who want to cover up their operations. By putting out 50 or 90 shares at a time they figure they will escape notice. And such transactions in the last three days have formed a good portion of the daily volume. More important, there has been only one day since last June 15 that buying orders from such customers have exceeded selling orders. This was last Saturday, just before the big boomlet got into high gear.

Volume Jumps.

Leaving aside what the wise men may be doing, assuming that there are any wise men where the stock market is concerned, notice should be taken of what happened today. The volume of 1,713,050 shares on the big board was the second greatest this year, being topped only by the volume on January 10. The composite average of 100 representative stocks advanced 1.13 points and topped the best shown in April and May. However, the average of the rails still held slightly below the best made in May. The market as a whole, during the last three days, has displayed the most convincing rise since the snapback which followed the panic selling of last October.

Gains in individual leaders today ran from 1 to 5 points and all groups of stocks participated in the extension of the recovery. Most active was United States Steel, which closed up nearly 2 points, and next was Chrysler, up 2½, while General Motors added 1¼.

Stocks closed near their best today and gains of representative leaders included American Can, 5½; Telephone, 5; Du Pont, 3½; General Electric, 1¼; Harvester, 2; Sears Roebuck, 1; Union Carbide, 3½; Westinghouse, 3⅜, and Woolworth, 1¾.

From trade sources came the word that in Worth street, New York's wholesale textile center, that a considerable pickup in activity had occurred and the Iron Age noted in its weekly survey that there is "a growing feeling that business generally this summer will not be as slack as expected."

Rail Bonds Gain More.

Railroad bonds forged ahead for the third successive day, in a fairly active listed bond session today. The advances became increasingly emphatic after an uncertain start, and upswings of 1 to 4 points appeared at the clore. Local tractions were unsettled by the interborough episode. United States Treasury and best grade corporate bonds were steady, while foreign dollar issues shared slightly in the mounting enthusiasm. Trading totaled $8,240,000 in all issues.

Intermediate-priced carrier bonds were the favorites, and gains of 2 to 3 points were the rule among such issues. So-called borderline issues also were in good demand, despite the lack of rail legislation at the last session of Congress. Even the default issues were marked substantially higher. Best grade rails were not much changed.

Interborough bonds dipped sharply at the start, on reports that some change might occur in the interest-payment procedure. But when it appeared that only the usual course would be taken, the bonds recovered and closed only 1 to 2 points down. B. M. T. 4½s were off fractionally. Some of the convertibles improve sharply in the industrial section. Holding company issues of other speculative bonds likewise improved. In the foreign group small fractional gains were usual.

United States Treasury securities were dull and closed lower by smallest fratcions. Interest in the long-term bonds flagged, and dealers reported lessened demand also for the short-term issues traded over the counter.

SEC Suspends Partner in Big Banking Firm

Faris R. Russell, of White, Weld & Co., Dropped From 3 Exchanges.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission directed yesterday that Faris R. Russell, a partner of White, Weld & Co. members of the New York and other exchanges, be suspended from three securities exchanges and simultaneously dismissed proceedings against all other members of the firm.

The commission found that Russell had violated the anti-manipulation provisions of the Securities act but that the other partners had not violated them.

Proceedings against the other partners were dismissed because of lack of evidence to support the commission's initial charge of manipulating the common stock of A. O. Smith & Co. on the New York Curb Exchange.

Russell, although not a member of any exchange himself, is, as defined by the Securities and Exchange act, a member of the New York Stock Exchange, the New York Curb Exchange, and the Chicago Board of Trade. The commission decreed his suspension from these three for 90 days.

The commission said that as the result of Russell's purchase, the stock of A. O. Smith advanced from $57 to $65 a share between April 12 through April 20, 1935.

Firm to Appeal.

New York, June 22 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange firm of White, Weld & Co. announced today it would file an appeal in the Federal Court from a decision of the Securities and Exchange Commission suspending one of its partners, Faris R. Russell, found by the SEC to have violated the anti-manipulation provisions of the securities act.

The penalty against Russell, the firm said in a formal statement, "is imposed in spite of the fact that the opinion finds that he had no fraudulent intent or 'bad' purpose. Mr. Russell is an esteemed and valuable member of our firm, and this finding against him, which we regard as entirely unwarranted, is of vital importance to us despite the dismissal of the case against our firm as such."

Exchange Censures Redmond & Co.

New York, June 22 (AP).—Governors of the New York Stock Exchange voted today to censure the exchange firm of Redmond & Co. and at the same time announced that H. Mason Day, a partner, would retire from the firm on September 30, 1938. The action, the board of governors' announcement said, involved "infractions of Federal margin regulations, not willful, but for which the senior managing partner, Day, was responsible. The announcement continued:

"In addition certain transactions were noted which were effected apparently by employes at recent financial questionnaire dates, so that the answers of such questionnaires submitted to the exchange did not correctly reflect the permanent capital position of the firm."

Day, the announcement added, retired as a general partner of the firm as of June 15 and will act as a special partner until September 30. He was formerly associated with Harry F. Sinclair and was convicted of contempt of court, along with Sinclair and W. Sherman Burns, as an aftermath of the Teapot Dome scandal.

April Jobless At New High

New York, June 22.—The number of persons unemployed in the United States rose in April for the seventh consecutive month, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. As in March, however, the increase in April was moderate in contrast to the rapid rise in the previous five months. Persons unemployed in April totaled 13,287,000 as compared with 13,194,000 in March and with 8,834,000 last September when the low point was reached prior to the current depression. During the seven months' period ended with April, 4,444,000 persons joined the ranks of the unemployed. The number of unemployed persons in April represented 25.7 per cent of the total supply of workers.

Preliminary reports indicate that unemployment showed a further rise in May and this rise seems likely to be extended during June and July. In fact there is little prospect at the present time of any great improvement in the situation during the remainder of the year.

N. Y. Stock Exchange Engages New Counsel

New York, June 22 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange today announced the appointment of the law firm of Milbank, Tweed & Hope as its counsel, succeeding Carter, Ledyard & Milburn, who had acted as its counsel for many years.

The exchange declined to comment on the change, but it was believed in exchange circles to be in connection with the market's general shakeup in administrative personnel, which recently brought 31-year-old William McC. Martin to the chairmanship. Carter, Ledyard & Milburn represented the exchange through its turbulent period of recent years, including its losing fight against Federal regulation.

Standard Gas Output.

Chicago, June 22.—Electric output of the public utility operating companies in the Standard Gas & Electric Co. system for the week ended June 18, 1938, totaled 98,145,797 kilowatt-hours, a decrease of 9.0 per cent compared with the corresponding week last year.

Stock Seat $58,000 Advance of $7,000

New York, June 22 (AP).—Arrangements were made today for the sale of a New York Stock Exchange membership at $58,000, up $7,000 from the last previous sale.

This is the first advance in the price of a membership since April 14. The high for the year was $75,000, last January 12, and the low was the last previous sale, $51,000, last week—the lowest since 1918.

I'VE NEVER BEEN SO FURIOUS IN MY LIFE! I WAS SITTING IN THE LOBBY OF THE GILTEDGE HOTEL WAITING FOR CLARA. SHE WAS AN HOUR LATE, WELL, SIR, ALL THAT TIME THE MOST DREADFUL MAN KEPT STARING AT ME! EVERY TIME I LOOKED UP, THERE HE WAS—NEVER TOOK HIS EYES OFF ME. I JUST WISH YOU HAD BEEN THERE TO—

"The Timid Soul" by Webster Appears in Sunday's Post.

Bob Burns Says—

The picture producers out here are going in more and more for realism. When they cast a picture now, they try to pick people who have actually lived the part.

Not long ago, when they were lookin' for a girl to play the part of a siren, they picked the biggest flirt in Hollywood, but she turned out to be a very poor actress.

After the director had taken one scene about nine times, he turned to the girl and said, "This is a very simple scene—the boy simply proposes to you and you refuse him. Surely you've been proposed to before!" The girl says, "Oh, yes, I've been proposed to hundreds of times, but I never refused any of them!"

Warring Tax Trial Put Off Until Fall

The Warring income tax trial was postponed at least until the fall term yesterday when United States Attorney David A. Pine decided to return Charles (Rags) to Atlanta to complete a penitentiary sentence imposed for a gang shooting.

Pine said that the Government is ready for trial, but that motions filed by defense attorneys would prevent early court action. The three Warring brothers, Gordon L. R. Sadur, of a tax accounting firm, and Henry L. Sherry are charged with conspiracy to defraud the Government of income taxes on profits from operating a "numbers" game. Warring's term at Atlanta is due to end the latter part of this summer.
